September 01, 2015

September 01, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

AntiGravity® Fitness announces free AntiGravity® Aerial Yoga classes for first-time fliers in celebration of National Yoga Month this September. Newcomers can take a first time flight with AntiGravity Aerial Yoga, offering AntiGravity Fundamentals: Open Level classes, at no cost throughout the month of September.

The evolutionary mind/body practice created by movement pioneer and inventor Christopher Harrison, first elevated yoga up into the air, giving birth to a wholly new category in the ancient discipline. AntiGravity® Aerial Yoga combines traditional yoga poses with moves from the aerial arts, Pilates and dance conditioning with the use of an original invention, the Harrison AntiGravity® Hammock.

The practice?s signature zero-compression inversions relieve spinal pressure and force realignment while reconnecting body and mind. The unique technique helps reduce back and neck pain, fosters joint mobility, stretches your body to its maximum height, and safely pushes fitness limits, all while having fun. During the course of the practice, participants conquer basic fears and discover a new level of self-confidence while benefitting from a solid workout.

?I first discovered yoga at an Ayurvedic center in India in the 90s,? says Christopher Harrison. ?During my quest to find relief for my own joint pain, I discovered that my silk hammock invention, used for aerial dance, also allowed me to adapt traditional yoga poses and movements, up into the air. AntiGravity Yoga was born from both the desire to create beautiful poses and my need to relieve back pain.?

AntiGravity Aerial Yoga is universal and offers something for every skill level. It will push seasoned yogis to their limit, elevating their practice, while also appealing to beginners who are looking for a fun, new experience. Everyone leaves class feeling lighter and uplifted.
