London, UK -- Best Rate Removals published a new blog update giving details on their new company uniform. A company uniform certainly carries an important message of professionalism and can do wonders towards brand building. Recently, Best Rate Removals updated their popular blog with a new post describing their new company uniform and the thoughts behind making it company policy.

Delivering a complete customer experience covers many factors large and small. One that often goes neglected is the impact something as simple as wearing a company uniform can have on the perception of a service-orientated business. One of the leaders in UK removals and storage, Best Rate Removals, recently updated their popular blog with a new post on this subject and their decision to now have their workers all wear very attractive and professional looking work uniforms. Clients have responded to the news with enthusiasm.

?Our blog is a valuable tool to communicate with our clients about changes we make to deliver more value to them whenever and wherever we can,? commented a spokesperson from the company. ?Our addition of new uniforms is just that kind of change and we thought there would be some interest in why we made this recent change.?

According to the company, they are very happy to offer premium quality, but affordably priced removals and storage anywhere in England, Wales, Scotland, or within the M25. The company only uses clean and dependable vans equipped with satellite navigation, and all the straps, tools and blankets needed to transport customer's belongings and to be sure they arrive at their destination safely and soundly.
