Company CEO Discusses the Many Benefits that Clean Group Commercial Cleaning Offers to Any Business

September 28, 2020

SYDNEY, NSW - September 28, 2020 -
Suji Siv, CEO of the Clean Group, wants to spread the news that businesses who hire professional commercial cleaning crews can realize many benefits by doing this. Many of these benefits are not always readily apparent if companies are just looking at the bottom line dollars they spend on professional commercial cleaning services. That?s why the company CEO felt it was so important to take a more in-depth at the true value that professional commercial cleaning services present to any business.

Siv says, ?Over the last several years we have seen some amazing growth here at the Clean Group. That includes expanding our commercial cleaning services into Brisbane Melbourne, and elsewhere throughout New South Wales. The reason for this growth is driven by the fact that more and more companies are starting to realize the many ways that hiring professional commercial cleaning services benefits them. Once companies see the amazing results that our commercial cleaners can achieve, we expect even more companies to come on board with us and we welcome them.?

The Clean Group?s CEO went on to say that professional commercial cleaning services such as those that they offer are proven to take cleanliness to a much higher level than most in-house cleaning crews can ever achieve. That?s because those on the commercial cleaning crews that the Clean Group has put together have experience, specialized training, and use state-of-the-art cleaning equipment. He says they also use only eco-friendly cleaning solutions that do not leave harmful residue behind. This higher level of cleaning will actually help companies save money that goes well beyond what they will spend on professional commercial cleaning services. The Clean Group CEO says this is because a cleaner working environment does such things as cut down on employee sick days which, in turn, will help any business keep their employees? more productive. He even went so far as to say a cleaner working environment is not only healthier but it will help improve the morale of the employees at any business too.

Siv also added that the higher level of cleanliness that is typically achieved by professional commercial cleaning crews makes a lasting impression on those that visit any business too. This can be very important for those companies that want to present a good image of themselves to their customers, investors, and other guests. He says those companies that hire out their commercial cleaning services can also free up their management teams from the extra hours it takes to supervise an in-house cleaning team and the worry and frustration that often goes along with that too.

According to the Clean Group CEO, he says that sometimes when he talks to potential commercial cleaning customers, they express some concerns about the particular nature that cleaning their type of business requires. He says that business owners and managers do not have to ever worry about this because they will sit down with the representative of any business and discuss what their specialized cleaning needs are. Once this has been done, they will then come up with a customized cleaning plan for that company and a price for the service. They will even schedule their commercial cleaning crews to do their services at the hours of the day or night that will interfere the least with any companies? daily operations. Siv added that as a company they have over 20 years of experience cleaning different types of commercial properties. This includes both large & small offices, gymnasiums, schools, government buildings, medical facilities, childcare centers, and more. For those businesses who would like to take added steps to help prevent the spread of Covid-19 at their workplace, the Clean Group CEO mentioned that they are now offering advanced Covid-19 cleaning services in addition to their regular commercial cleaning services.
