Bloomingdale, Illinois-based Insurance Covered Baby Formula is reaching out to answer some of the most frequently asked questions they receive from their community. This is the company's latest effort to make their products more easily accessible to anyone, with minimum hassle and inconvenience.

"While we always welcome our client's calls and inquiries with open arms, we hope that having this resource available to them at all times will have a positive impact on their experience," states a representative of Insurance Covered Baby Formula. They add, "We will still be answering and helping our clients address any inquiries about covered formulas or their specific situation, however. This is more of a tool for our community rather than ourselves. We are committed to our work, and we will not turn down any members of our community in need."

While they have received a great number of questions, the company chose to answer a select few that they believe are most pertinent to the majority of their clients. They narrowed the list down to the six most crucial facts that an individual needs to know when looking to get insurance covered baby formula.

The first item addressed on their list is whether or not a prescription is needed to apply for the formula. They explain, "Your insurance will most likely request a prescription from your child?s pediatrician before they approve any payments. This can either be a minor inconvenience or a major setback depending on who you plan to buy the formula from. Some providers can be more helpful than others in helping you get this prescription. When it comes to us at Insurance Covered Baby Formula, we have a dedicated team of insurance specialists who are always ready to work with our clients and their pediatricians to get the prescription they need."

Insurance Covered Baby Formula states that they will help their clients find out whether or not their insurance covers any of their baby formula products. Through the company?s website, clients can submit a form to request the assistance of one of their insurance specialists (who will contact them to review their benefits). The company states, "Our specialists will help you determine which baby formulas your insurance covers as well as the best option according to your needs and situation. We offer a broad variety of products, including hypoallergenic, premature and metabolic formulas, which means you can rely on us to get the solution you need."

The company states that the guidance of their insurance specialists is available even after the order has been placed. Once they receive their client's order (along with the pediatrician's prescription), the insurance specialist goes on to handle other important details of the order. They will be in charge of keeping their client up to date with news regarding shipping and approval of the product. The formula is typically shipped within 1-5 business days after the purchase is approved by the insurance provider. It will then arrive anywhere from one day to a week at their client's doorstep, depending on their location.

Insurance Covered Baby Formula also addresses whether or not they allow returns for products. They state, "If you receive the wrong or damaged formula, you can reach out to us and we will make sure to address the issue. We may issue authorization and/or exchange the unopened formula, depending on the circumstances. One thing to note, however, is that due to the hygienic nature of our products, we are not able to issue credits or return authorizations for formula products that have been opened."

If the client is content with the product they have received, they can opt to join the company?s monthly formula subscription program. Anyone is eligible to take advantage of this as long as they are qualified by their insurance, They are automatically enrolled to receive monthly shipments of formula until their child?s first birthday.

The company's website offers more details on Insurance Covered Baby Formula, their products and services. Interested parties may connect with the company by filling a form on their website. More information on the company's hypoallergenic formula is available on their website as well.
