Ellicott City, MD ? Heil Plumbing, a local plumbing company in Ellicott City, understands the importance of helping others during difficult times. As the world adjusts to the many changes brought on by the pandemic, it is important that everyone does their part to give back in their local communities. The team at Heil Plumbing has been dedicating both their time and services to helping their community.

With more people staying home, most plumbing issues can be seen as emergencies. Heil Plumbing has remained open and accessible throughout the pandemic, providing superior service as always. To protect both their customers and employees, technicians wear masks, gloves, and booties when called out to a job. Their highly trained team is available 24/7 to answer calls for simple fixture repairs to complex plumbing emergencies.

In addition to staying open, Heil Plumbing has also made extra contributions to the residents and businesses within their community. They recently collected donations of food and other snacks that were delivered to the front-line healthcare workers at a local hospital. The Heil team also took the time to deliver toilet paper, paper towels and other difficult to find supplies to elderly and homebound individuals living in their city.

As a local and family-owned business, Heil Plumbing takes pride in being a part of their community. Team member Laurie Heil says, "We are so thankful for the many years of support from our community, so we feel it is important that we choose to give back during these difficult and uncertain times. As an essential business, we appreciate all of the efforts from other essential personnel and first responders, so we are proud to show our support in every way we can."
