FMS Online Marketing, an SEO agency based in Waddell, Arizona, has revealed that what distinguishes them from most SEO agencies is their unique strategy of leveraging Google?s own properties for the benefit of their clients. They are knowledgeable on how to get superior results while protecting their clients at the same time. And when it comes to on-page optimization for their clients, they consider it as an opportunity to build a strategy within their website and the build outward, creating a massive digital footprint that feeds Google?s algorithm the information they want.

Matt Deloff, owner of FMS Online Marketing, says, ?Our sole purpose is to improve a company?s online presence in search and social media in order to acquire new customers and help build their brand online. We will accomplish this through the most successful search engine optimization strategies, improving search rankings, converting traffic into customers, and turning customers into brand evangelists. Our attention will always be on the ?bigger picture? of your business.?

They have significant experience in all areas of online marketing, and they fully understand the importance of having a strong online presence. It should be noted that 90 percent of all searches for a product or service starts with the use of a search engine. Their services for SEO customers can be tailor-fitted to their budget and needs. The company?s SEO consultants will discuss with the customers their business goals. They will then conduct a research regarding the customers? industry, competition, and the keywords they desire to target.

Another vital service offered by FMS Online Marketing is local SEO and Google Map marketing. FMS believes that a client?s SEO plan cannot be chosen from a pre-designed set of packages. A successful SEO strategy has to be specifically tailored and personalized for each particular client to comply with their own local online goals. They believe that Google is all about relevance. If Google thinks certain businesses are relevant to their particular industry, their website and local Google profile will have higher organic and local rankings.

In addition, they also offer a very powerful press release service which involves the creation and sharing of content to major media platforms for the purpose of building a strong online presence for it's customers. At FMS, they believe that powerful content is the best way to influence people and motivate them to consider the company?s product or service.

And with more than 65 percent of searches now being done on mobile devices, mobile SEO services have been rising in popularity. Mobile SEO requires a unique approach that facilitates fast and easy viewing of the most relevant information regarding the business. It should be noted that mobile search is usually locally oriented, with searchers being closer to the end of their shopping phase and likely ready to make a purchase. Thus, businesses can?t afford not to implement mobile SEO. Search engines provide different results for desktop and mobile search. FM provides optimization services for both.

FMS also offers social media advertising services because of the important role that social networks are playing in the lives of many people. For instance, Facebook is accessed approximately eight times a day. Thus, it only makes sense that 61 million businesses have a Facebook Page are attempting to market their products or services to Facebook users. The strategy employed by FMS is essential to providing Facebook?s new algorithm what it is looking for so that Facebook will reward the client?s business pages with a steady stream of potential clients.

Website design services are also essential because the website is the online equivalent of a business? physical store or place of business. However, not all websites are created equal. FMS designs websites that can really perform, from clean and simple layouts to user friendly navigation, the websites they design are optimized for effective marketing, social media, and search engines.
