

Weez Labs Announces Mobile App Development for Apple iOS 8

October 27, 2014

October 27, 2014 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Santa Monica, CA ? Santa Monica Mobile app development company Weez Labs announce they are now providing development and upgrades for mobile apps for Apple?s new iOS 8. The release of iOS 8 has been one of the largest releases in Apple?s history. Companies eager to get on board with this latest technology will now have the ability to have customized apps or have their current apps upgraded to work within this operating system.

The introduction of the iOS 8 is an exciting advancement for developers since it opens up new areas by including more than 4,000 new APIs. Talented designers, coders and app developers, such as those at Weez Labs, will be able to expand their reach and develop apps with more content and function for the most useful and natural user experience. This new technology also means that game development possibilities have never been so advanced.

For companies who want to connect with their customers using Apple mobile devices, Weez Labs can take advantage of the engineering of the iOS 8 platform to create new mobile apps for Apple devices that are well ahead of the curve in terms of ease of use, efficiency and that have the most features possible. In addition to iOS 8 development of mobile apps, Weez Labs has the ability to upgrade a company?s existing apps for seamless integration with iOS 8 technology.

As a mobile app agency, Weez Labs is also an Android app developer, helping their clients with new approaches to mobile applications. One example of the company?s expertise in android app development is DoggCatcher, a podcast management app produced by Weez Labs. This app was the first of its kind and earned the company a 2011 Android Central Award.

In addition to mobile apps, Weez Labs offers a range of services, including large website design and database architecture.
