Alpha Therapeutics LLC, a private label CBD oil manufacturer, has announced that they are offering wholesale CBD oil manufacturing services in Phoenix, Arizona, and San Diego, California. They also offer custom CBD oil manufacturing because they have the experience and knowledge for manufacturing a wide range of high quality CBD oil products. They can collaborate with clients to make sure that a new formulation is developed that will comply with the specific product development desired. The company?s team members have the expertise and knowledge in developing difficult formulations for many products, including beauty products. They can provide help in determining the appropriate combination of ingredients for the client?s specific product and they can adjust the labels, sizes, and testing requirements without affecting the quality of the CBD products.

Geoff Dada, CEO of Alpha Therapeutics LLC, says, ?Our CBD manufacturing company ensures that the customer formulation process includes quality assurance, true labeling, consultant?s advice, research and development, potency guarantee, rapid development and creative design. Irrespective of the type of CBD product which is being developed, the standards of the manufacturing facility are of prime importance. Certified laboratories, rigorous inspection, testing and significant oversight of the plants? growth standards are of prime importance to us and our clients. The introduction of even a few harmful substances into the fertilization, watering and pest control processes are a risk to the quality of the finished products.?

In addition to CBD oil products, they also develop organic cannabigerol (CBG) products. One example is organic CBG oil for pain in the form of a 2:1 CBG/CBD pain stick. This product has a concentration of 2000 mg CBG and 1000 mg CBD. This product is assured to be THC free and is designed to be applied topically at the site of the pain to provide temporary relief for soreness, joint pain, and muscle tension.

It should be noted that THC or delta-9 tetrahydrocannabinol is the psychoactive compound in cannabis that is responsible for the ?high? felt by people. On the other hand, CBD or cannabidiol and CBG are not psychoactive and will not alter the user?s state of mind. This means that people may be able to benefit from the potential health benefits of CBD and CBG without worrying about any psychoactive effects.

Cannabinoids do their function in the body by attaching themselves to receptors. Certain cannabinoids are naturally produced by the human body and these attach themselves to cannabinoid receptors, which are the CB1 and CB2 receptors. CB1 receptors can be found throughout the body but are concentrated in the brain. In the brain, they are involved with functions, such as coordination, mood, movement, pain, memories, emotions, thinking, and appetite. Meanwhile, CB2 receptors appear to be involved with the immune system, pain, and inflammation. THC is able to form links to these receptors. On the other hand, CBD doesn?t attach itself to the CB1 or CB2 receptors. Rather, CBD seems to stimulate the body to use more of its own cannabinoids.

Both marijuana and hemp come from Cannabis, but hemp is the least processed form of cannabis. Hemp is where the most of the CBD used for medical purposes is obtained. This is because the marijuana plants are usually selectively bred by farmers for the purpose of increasing the THC content, while hemp plants are seldom modified. Methods of extracting cannabinoid without affecting the other naturally occurring chemicals in the hemp plant have been developed.

Many of these naturally occurring compounds, such as CBD and CBG, are not hallucinogenic. These products are in the form of CBD vape cartridges, CBD e-liquids, CBD terpenes, CBD tinctures, CBD lotions and cosmetics, CBD salve, CBD for pets, and CBD capsules. Alpha Therapeutics LLC has the capability to take the manufacturing of these products from the field to the shelves when companies opt to use the company for private label CBD oil manufacturing.
