October 13, 2020 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Water damage is a major disaster that affects thousands of homes and businesses every single day. Unfortunately this can be caused by the simplest of things like an unnoticed leaky pipe or a toilet that overflows. Most people either leave this leak for too long or don't properly clean the area when the toilet overflows. Both of these scenarios result in mold growth which can make the air quality toxic to breathe.

Luckily, there is no reason to worry. Total Quality Water Damage Repair is a new water damage company in Denver, CO. The company has already helped thousands of residents and business owners with various water damage restoration needs.

They are constantly growing their team of technicians and service area in order to help as many people as possible. Their team is professionally trained on how to repair any kind of water damage and each technician has years of experience under their belt. They will be able to handle any restoration job, no matter how big.

Although the company is known for water damage restoration, that isn't the only service that they offer. They also provide local residents with reliable water extraction, surface sanitization, and storm damage cleanup. They use the most updated techniques and high tech equipment in order to efficiently take care of any damages inflicted on the property.

The team is constantly going to water damage restoration seminars and workshops all across the nation to stay up to date on the most advanced techniques and strategies. This keeps their services fast and affordable.

A representative of the company recently said, "Water is very destructive when left unnoticed for too long. It only takes a few inches of standing water in order to completely destroy the structure of a building. Also, standing water can cause mold growth which not only damages anything it grows on, but also makes the air toxic to breathe. If anyone notices water damage in their building, they should contact a professional immediately. The longer they wait the more money and time it will take to repair the issues."

The company has helped thousands of residents in Denver, CO since they have opened. They are known to be the most professional and effective water damage restoration company in the area.

If anyone has water damage in their home or business they should contact Total Quality Water Damage Repair immediately. Their team of technicians will be happy to help anyone with water damage. They can be contacted by phone or on their website at <https://totalqualitywaterdamage.com/>.
