In line with its tradition to bring only the best baby products, 3 Bees and Me announced that their changing pad station for babies has a unique wing design. The design was conceptualized under the premise that babies' hands often touch dirty surfaces during diaper change. It is one of the features of the product that they are really proud of.

“One of our goals is to provide unique baby products that everyone would love to use. This is the main reason why we made sure that our popular changing kit with pad has a very unique design,” says Holly James, 3 Bees and Me representative. She further added, “Other brands usually have the regular square or rectangle shaped mats and we wanted customers to have another option. The wing design is perfect for babies to keep their hands away from dirty surfaces that may harbor germs and bacteria.”

This wing design has become very popular among its users. In fact, it is one of the reasons why the product has received many good reviews already in their Amazon page. In a review by Angelghost Valenzuela, she shared what she thinks about the changing station. As written on the review, “Great quality product. Easy to use, carry, and it's easy to clean after each use. I like the design of this changing pad as well. Simple but looks elegant and affordable. Long enough that my 6 months old niece can still fit when I lay her down to change. I love it. I will absolutely recommend this product. Great for outdoor or indoor use.?

The changing pad diaper clutch has a classic Chevron-patterned design. The clutch itself, as well as the mat, is made of great quality vinyl material that is very easy to clean and dry. It has a mesh pouch that is secured by Velcro. The expandable pockets can house various baby essential items such as diapers and small baby toys. The clutch is also compact and perfect for small trips. In front of the clutch is a zippered pocket that can safely keep other valuables such as money.

The unique wing design mat that comes with the clutch is still available at Amazon. This product is a favorite baby shower gift.
