October 20, 2020 -

Denton, Texas - Pack N? Mail is a neighborhood?USPS shipping store?in the Denton area. The local shipping store is highlighting the recently announced 2021 United States Postal Service pricing changes. Overall, rates will be increasing for the upcoming year. The price modifications are set to take effect on January 24, 2021, should no other changes be implemented prior to this time. The current recommended rate changes would increase the existing price of all first-class mail by 1.8 percent and all other categories by 1.5 percent.

The United States Postal Service's example list of items includes five products. According to the list, all letters and flats weighing one ounce or less will continue to cost 55 cents and one dollar, sequentially. The cost for each additional ounce for letters will increase from 15 cents to 20 cents. Furthermore, metered letters of one ounce will increase in cost from 50 cents to 51 cents. The expense of all domestic postcards will increase from 35 cents to 36 cents once the changes occur.

U.S. Postal Service is happy to still be able to provide some of the most affordable letter-mail rates in the industrialized world, even with the planned January 2021 rate increase. The Postal Service Board of Governors has already authorized the price boost, and the firm believes that this is the optimal method to keep rates competitive while supplying much-needed income for the agency at the same time.
