SYDNEY, NSW - October 21, 2020 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Clean Group (<https://www.clean-group.com.au/covid-19-sanitising-cleaning-sydney/>) is a Sydney-based commercial cleaning agency that is engaged in providing a complete range of cleaning services to all types of commercial properties in and around Sydney. As the businesses in the city and around the country combat the coronavirus and are looking for ways to keep their operations going, Clean Group experts share their recommendations and suggestions for maintaining proper cleaning at commercial places along with the challenges being faced by cleaners.

One of the common means for the coronavirus to spread is through infected surfaces and things. Places like offices and stores that are frequently visited by a lot of people and surfaces that are constantly touched can contribute to spreading the virus. Maintaining adequate cleaning and regularly disinfecting your business place are the only ways to ensure the safety of your staff and customers. For all your COVID cleaning and disinfection needs, you can call Clean Group, says Suji Siv, owner, and CEO of Clean Group.

Clean Group's owner Suji Siv talks about the various challenges being faced by cleaners worldwide during the pandemic and what his company is doing differently to deal with the situation while continuing to provide top-quality & safe cleaning to its clients.

While the coronavirus pandemic has presented a severe concern to the health and safety of humans, a more pressing matter that the governments worldwide have to deal with is how to keep the economy afloat. Businesses, especially small industries, are struggling to keep their operations running amidst the ongoing troubles. As the leading health authorities, including the World Health Organization, have recommended people to keep themselves and their premises clean in order to beat the virus and prevent the infection from spreading, the demand for expert corona cleaners has boosted in the past few months.

We are getting more than 100 queries daily and providing disinfecting cleaning to a number of businesses across the country,? says Suji. Now that businesses are looking to re-open after the COVID-19 lockdown, they want to follow all the safety measures recommended by the governments. To ensure the safety of their staff and visitors, they want their premises to be cleaned and disinfected properly, which is, of course, the right thing to do in this situation. But the problem is that any average or inexperienced cleaner cannot do a good job of cleaning/disinfecting a commercial place for the coronavirus. They may not have the experience and/or resources for this purpose.

Disinfection cleaning takes a slightly different approach than a regular cleaning job. After the basic cleaning, dusting, or washing of a surface, the cleaner has to apply a sanitiser solution using a meticulously designed method (spraying or fogging) in order to remove the viruses, germs & bacteria from that surface.

Clean Group(<https://sites.google.com/site/commercialcleaningsydneynew/cleaning/corona-cleaning>) uses a highly effective disinfection method called the Defence Shield. Their cleaners use an electrostatic sprayer to throw a shower of Zoono-71 Surface Sanitiser on the target surface. This sanitiser is effective in the killing of all known viruses, including the COVID-19 virus. The electrostatic sprayer used for this purpose sends electronically charged sanitiser particles to the surface that can automatically spread across the surface and kill all kinds of pathogens.

At the same time, the cleaners providing COVID disinfection & cleaning services must be trained to follow safe cleaning practices, including the use of masks, gloves, etc. and steps to ensure the safety of their own and others. Corona cleaners at Clean Group, for instance, are provided with intense training along with best-in-class resources to ensure effective and safe cleaning results. Their COVID cleaning technique can kill up to 99.99% of germs with up to 30 days of protection, as verified by the Therapeutic Goods Administration (TGA).

?At Clean Group, we never stopped serving our clients. Even during the lockdown, we worked hard to learn new techniques to effectively deal with infectious disease and the best practices to control the virus spread in commercial settings. We used this time to upgrade ourselves and our service offerings. Now, we offer a complete range of routine and one-off disinfection cleaning services with the use of state-of-the-art electrostatic sprayers,? says Suji Siv.

Local businesses or any commercial entity in Sydney looking for a reliable COVID-19 cleaning & disinfection service can approach Clean Group for all their cleaning needs.
