London, UK ? In keeping with their mission to raise awareness of unique travel destinations and itineraries, VisaCompare (www.visacompare.com) has just published a new blog post entitled 'Customised Country Guides on Must Visit Places For Film and TV Buffs'. It's one thing to travel to another world through imagination on the big or small screen. It's another to walk through the trails, over the hills and valleys and explore up close the moon of Tataouine from Star Wars fame or the castle's of Harry Potter

The article discusses some helpful country guides for places located around the world where favourite fictional places unfolded in front of the big (and small) screen. In particular, it discusses Croatia, which is the fictional location of King's Landing from the popular series Game of Thrones; the Lofoten Islands of Norway, inspiration for the fictional Kingdom of Arendelle in Walt Disney's Frozen; the shire of Middle Earth where Hobbits roamed and epic journeys to save the world began is still alive and thriving in New Zealand in the town of Matamata; and then there's the incredible ghost town the Henry River Mill Village which served to inspire a home for heroine Katniss Everdeen and her family before she was recruited to play in the Hunger Game.

The article states that those who plan on visiting any of these places, but have little idea on how to apply for a visa, can seek help from companies like VisaCompare, which provides useful information and guides handy for any adventure. Hollywood and the UK have had their share of popular filming locations, but according to the article these are not the only places to see the magic of the movies unfold before the eyes.

An internationally owned and funded comparison search engine, VisaCompare, with offices globally in Hong Kong and London, is a totally independent company with no preferences or affiliations to any country, immigration company/immigration service provider or destination. Their only aim is to provide help to those planning to connect with the best immigration companies and service providers worldwide.
