October 30, 2020 -

Woodinville, Wash. - Northwest Trophy and Awards encourages companies and groups around the nation to manage their award events a little differently during this awards season. Due to the spread of coronavirus (COVID-19) affecting the United States, many awards ceremonies are seeking out new, safe ways to continue as usual while taking safety into consideration. The Woodinville awards store is giving consumers a safer alternative by talking with organizations regarding virtual award ceremonies rather than traditional ones. Northwest Trophy and Awards can help provide insight into the process, along with ideas and alternatives to help a virtual awards ceremony run smoothly.

Northwest Trophy and Awards starts the virtual award ceremony process by providing a sizeable online catalog for customers to view and tailor their items to fit their needs from the comfort of their home. Additionally, the company is providing shipping alternatives that will enable consumers to have actual prizes delivered to winners in time for the online event. Northwest Trophy and Awards can help businesses and teams figure out the optimal time and method to ship each award so that they arrive on time and in perfect condition.

Although planning a virtual award show may seem complicated, Northwest Trophy and Awards encourages hosts to back virtual awards shows, as office teams and sports groups throughout the nation need inspiration more than ever. COVID-19 has dampened life enormously, so virtual award shows, while difficult to arrange, provide some sort of normality.

Northwest Trophy and Awards has been a trusted local business since 1950. The company uses a variety of crafted items and specializes in providing the best quality art glass, plaques, custom awards, crystal awards, and much more.
