November 16, 2020 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Austin, TX-based LocalBusinessWatch.site is pleased to announce that there is a new commercial photography studio ready to work with clients in Austin. The company is run by a husband and wife duo who have a great deal of photography experience. They provide wedding photography in Austin as well as the surrounding areas, and many couples in the area have already made use of the company's talents.

"We are a team of local wedding photographers and videographers who work in the Austin TX and surrounding areas," says Brad of B Turner Photography, the new studio. "When quarantine started earlier this year, we were forced to rethink the way that we do business. We started to do a lot more small business photos and videos for small businesses in the Austin area. We also invested in equipment to do product photography and video from home so that we could continue to offer the same high quality photography and video that normally would be done on location. We are so grateful to be able to continue to work with businesses both small and large at this time when a digital presence is more important than ever. We love to help businesses reach customers and establish an online presence through high quality media for social media, websites and advertising."

Localbusinesswatch.site provides a platform on which one can experiment with Google Sites and its functions and capabilities. The platform brings together a wide range of businesses from all over the United States and looks to increase awareness around local businesses by bringing news about these brands to a wider audience through the best channels on the internet. A large number of business owners lack the marketing expertise needed to make their brand sound interesting to potential consumers. They often end up making their brands sound boring, which causes consumers to become disinterested in the product or service and in turn eventually leads to a sharp decrease in sales as the brand stops being talked or thought about by consumers.

In this day and age, especially with the COVID-19 pandemic, it is very important for a business to have a strong online presence to ensure that potential consumers are constantly being made aware of whatever service or product a business offers. One way to create a strong presence online is to promote important news about the business, and this can be done through Google Sites, a powerful tool for anyone looking to market their site.

Local Business Watch's platform features pages and pages of news articles regarding businesses in certain areas. B Turner Photography is one of the many local businesses in Austin whose news Local Business Watch is reporting, and the studio will likely see an increase in potential clients in the area. With Local Business Watch's innovative techniques, any business is guaranteed to see an increase in customers. The site's news articles often lead to a boost to the online presence of a particular business, and there are countless other businesses whose news can be found on Local Business Watch Austin's front page.

The site reports on all kinds of news. 5-Star reviews, for example, are always good news, and Local Business Watch ensures that everyone knows when a local business is being talked about. One example is how a Chicago plumber refocused their shop around a new drain cleaning technology that is superior to what their competition uses on roots that wreck drainage pipes. By promoting their new technology on Google Sites with new video and content, Local Business Watch was able to take their business to a new level ? with many customers leaving glowing reviews of the company. This placed the plumbing company in a position to use the great reviews of their new technology as news, which then increased their online visibility and now continues to encourage customers to give their services a try.
