Aid & Prep, a Pasadena, CA based emergency supplies company has introduced their first product in the Amazon marketplace. The company's first offering in the online store is their environmentally friendly complete first aid kit. This kit is made for use in the home, car and office as well as for travel. It is designed to be OSHA and ANSI compliant and has clearly displayed FDA labels.

"So many first aid kits on the market are assembled in China," says Brodie Vaughn from Aid & Prep. "The consumer has no way to know if the contents are expired and what the ingredients are. Our kits clearly list FDA content labels and lot numbers so you know exactly what's inside and when to replace necessary items."

The first aid kit is quickly proving to be a favorite in the prepper supplies niche. Many consumers in this niche will have several different types of first aid kits based on their activities and their location. The Aid & Prep kit stands out because it is packed in a multi-pocketed environment-friendly pouch. This ensures that the kit remains organized after each use and folds up small enough to be taken wherever first aid might be needed.

This kit contains over 250 different items. These include ointment, sting relief, a cold compress, aspirin, non-aspirin pain relief, burn cream, tweezers, gauze, gloves, bandages, fold out storage pockets, and much more. All of these items are conveniently stored in compact carry case and there are even additional pockets for items to be added by the consumer. Additionally, the kit is assembled in the USA and comes complete with FDA labels clearly displaying the contents of the items inside. These labels and lot numbers distinguish the Aid & Prep kit from other kits that are assembled entirely in China and do not have FDA labels or lot numbers.

The product has become popular with hikers and because of its lightweight it can easily be used as a camping first aid kit. "Our kits are the most complete and best organized USA assembled option on the market," adds Brodie Vaughn. The company noted the importance of having so many items available in a first aid kit as these kits are often the first thing one turns to when an emergency occurs.
