Aid & Prep, a Pasadena, California based company, has announced that they have been receiving rave reviews for their 250 piece first aid kit after the product's initial launch. The first aid kit was first on the Amazon marketplace just a short time ago, and has been gaining in popularity since the first day of its release. Consumers have been offering positive comments on the kit, based on the completeness of the items included, as well as organization and ease of storage.

Maren Vaughn is the wife of Broderick "Brodie" Vaughn and co-founder of Aid and Prep. She recently stated, "I knew our first aid kit would resonate with moms in particular. The items are designed for everyday emergencies and you have the added security of knowing that everything is up to date and up to USA standards. We are thrilled that our Amazon launch is going so well. As a small family owned company Amazon gives us the opportunity to reach millions of customers and that means we get to help millions more people get and stay prepared."

The company reports that many of their customers, one of whom is married to a nurse, are recommending to others on the marketplace that they purchase multiple kits calling it the "best first aid kit" on the market. Customers were thrilled that it is more than suitable for a car first aid kit, as well as a home first aid kit, and are recommending that other customers purchase a third kit to keep in their office.

The first aid kit is designed to be compliant with both OSHA and ANSI, and includes antibiotic ointment, cold compresses, aspirin, non-aspirin pain relievers, burn cream, gloves, gauze, bandages and much more.

With an average of five stars out of nearly 100 customer reviews since its initial launch, the 250 piece kit is backed by Aid & Prep's 100 percent money back guarantee. The company also guarantees that every kit they sell on Amazon is completely assembled in the U.S.A. Those interested can find the kit on the Amazon marketplace.
