All Systems Go Marketing (ASGM), based in La Mesa, California, recently published a blog post which explores the building blocks of content generation. The blog post, titled "Know These Three Content Building Blocks," is meant to educate the community on how to boost their businesses using online content. The company specializes in HVAC Digital Marketing Services, and they are utilizing their blog post to share some of their experience and insight.

Today, the vast majority of businesses (if not all) are attempting to get involved in e-commerce, which is already crowded with companies that made this move in the internet's relative infancy. As a result, they are all implementing strategies to try and get more attention turned towards their business. Once a company is successful in having a larger community notice their business, ASGM's post asserts that they will then, "try their darndest to convert them into paying customers who will actually buy the business' product or service." For the first step of getting more people to visit a website, one must have effective SEO strategies.

The company notes that, "SEO has been practiced for more than 20 years already, which means almost all businesses have some form of SEO practice in their online marketing arsenal." This is why creativity and strategy are important for success. If one wants to achieve top-notch SEO ranking, one must try unique methods to mix it up with varied types of content. The post goes on to reason that, "After all, having only one kind of content may at most appeal to only one type of audience. With different content formats, the chances of attracting different kinds of audiences is higher, which then exposes your business to more people and increases your chances of making a sale."

One important factor to consider is social media. Content on social media becomes most effective when it adapts so that it is relevant with the times. Social media users rely on their accounts to stay informed with what is trending in contemporary culture - thus staying relevant is a necessity for any business that looks to succeed in the modern world. Although this type of content is not causally related to search ranking results, having a company's social media assets perform well will contribute to its brand recognition, which in turn will positively impact SEO efforts.

Another benefit of social media is that content can be created in a short time. Although some content, particularly visual media like videos and photos, need to be original and subject to editing and other procedures, content which is text based can be easily recycled or modified for use on social media platforms. Text content on a brand website and blogs can be promoted on social media through links as well. The post emphasizes that, "social media works much more effectively for those businesses that have a strong understanding of their current customer base and/or have a strong understanding of the market they want to target."

Podcasts have also gained popularity because they are readily available and are easily consumed by existing and potential consumers. Users can listen to podcasts while they are doing housework or running errands, making it convenient for many. If a brand is interested in creating podcasts to promote products or services, the post elaborates that one, "should have an easy time producing them because you will be just writing relevant content and recording a reading of what you wrote." Podcasts are effective because they are traffic magnets, which usually have a positive impact on search engine rankings.

Case studies are also an effective strategy as consumers are often searching for real data "as opposed to unreliable or fake news. A case study which gets traction with other websites, particularly news sites, will help ensure SEO results start climbing quickly, which in turn boosts credibility. To quote the post, "case studies are stories. They involve characters, conflict and resolutions, and all of that showmanship brings your product or service to life. Without them, you can't illustrate the ways your product can be used. Instead, you're merely depicting the basics like where, when and how your service came to be. While that information is important, stories are a more powerful way to activate the brain and persuade someone."
