September 16, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Orange, California-based plumbing company, Rooter Hero Plumbing of Orange County, has recently begun installing a new generation of toilets designed to save consumers money. Smart-Flush toilets are specifically designed to prevent overflow, detect leaks, and provide simple flushing solutions to prevent water waste. This state-of-the-art technology has is bringing the average toilet into the 21st century and saving customers a great deal of money.

Jessica Perrault, spokesperson for Rooter Hero Plumbing of Orange County, announced, "We've begun to offer these amazing toilets to our residential and commercial customers. The technology helps to ensure that water usage is drastically cut, saving potentially hundreds of dollars every year on water bills."

The EPA estimates that around 20 percent of more than 200 million toilets in homes throughout the United States develop leaks every year, and most are due to leaky flappers. These leaks lead to more than 500 gallons of water waste every day. Smart-Flush toilets, installed by Rooter Hero Plumbing, are specifically designed to eliminate this problem, and provide water control that helps consumers save money even when no leaks are present.

Smart-Flush toilets are designed with sensors that prevent additional flushing when water levels reach critical points. Built-in sensors also help to identify potential leaks in the tank, helping to save water, which ultimately saves money. Preventing leaks not only helps to save on overall water usage and cost, it can help to avoid expensive damage to walls and floors when leaks get out of hand. Many of these new toilets also offer touch-free flush.

"They're an affordable way to upgrade your home bathroom and save yourself a bit of money on water costs," states Perrault. "Consumers today need to save money wherever they can, and cutting utility bills is one of the best, and often easiest ways to do this."

Rooter Hero Plumbing states that their plumbers are available for new toilet installation in Orange County, CA, today. The company also offers no-cost consultations with homeowners to answer any questions they may have about toilet repair or replacement.
