U-Guard Security Products LLC, a company based in Atlanta, Georgia, has revealed that they have provided on their website a detailed educational page on taser laws by each US state to make sure that ordinary citizens will know if it is legal to own a taser or carry one as a way to protect themselves. Tasers are actually legal in most of the states, with only the states of Hawaii and Rhode Island prohibiting the purchase, possession, and use of tasers for civilian self-defense, as of early 2020. It is important to note, however, that it is not legal to use an electric shock device for committing a crime or in such a way that could result in breaking the law.

Steve Trudeau, President of U-Guard Security Products, says, "Understanding the law requirements on handling and owning the taser versus stun gun is essential. The good news is that the laws governing the two are very similar, and the details are provided in our educational page for taser that will provide the answer to the most common questions about tasers and whether it is legal to carry a taser or simply own one in a particular city, county, or state."

Since many people are confused when it comes to differentiating the taser or taser gun with a stun gun, the above-mentioned educational page explains how they differ. A taser is an electric shock device that shoots projectile darts and are generally more costly and have more advanced features compared to stun guns. Most stun devices are direct contact non-lethal electric shock weapons. Thus, stun guns must touch the body for a few seconds to be able to function properly. Meanwhile, tasers may be used as a stun gun in the event that the stun dart cartridge has been removed or all the darts have already been used. Many of the taser models will shoot two stun darts on a thin cable from a one-time use replaceable taser cartridge. Click to learn more about taser laws.

The primary advantage of a taser over a stun gun is that it allows the user to keep away from the assailant for distance of about 8 to 20 feet, providing for better control and safety. It should be noted that while the laws governing tasers and stun guns are similar, there are some additional requirements on a few states for tasers regarding age, background checks, and permits.

U-Guard Security Products LLC offers a wide range of tasers and stun guns. These include an 18-inch stun stick lightning rod baton tazer; a compact pink stun baton personal self-defense weapon and flashlight; a purple knuckle taser stun gun; a streetwise triple sting ring mini stun gun with carbon fiber pattern; a handheld stun gun with a number of self defense options; a mini stun gun with spikes for active people who want protection while jogging, running, or walking; a ZAP blast knuckle extreme stun gun; a shock ring stun gun that is small enough to be easy to conceal; a stun gun self defense knuckles hand taser for active men and women; a small pink taser flashlight, which is one of the best stun guns for women with small hands; and more.

All of the less lethal self-defense weapons from U-Guard Security Products are provided with a satisfaction purchase guarantee, if for whatever reason the buyer thinks the product is not satisfactory. Each model come with comprehensive instructions for function and operation to ensure safe and proper operation. Most of these products will not need any special training or permits.

U-Guard Security Products LLC offers a limited lifetime warranty for most of the products that they offer, ensuring that the products don't have any manufacturing defects and that their quality assurance team have reviewed all of the products for durability, quality, fit, and function.
