December 23, 2020 -

In a recent blog post, Ward Maedgen Accident Attorneys gave a tip-of-the-hat to the Dallas Independent School District (ISD) for their huge Thanksgiving time food distribution event. Those in charge of the school district decided to put on this event because they realize that more families than ever are struggling during the ongoing pandemic. The event, which was held at eleven Dallas area school locations on November 23rd, turned out to be a huge success. Long lines of cars were seen at these locations throughout the 11 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. hours the food was given out. The attorneys at this reputable Dallas law firm like to acknowledge those who do good works in the Dallas area as part of their desire to take part in and promote local community events.

A spokesperson for the firm says, ?Many of us here at Ward Maedgen Accident Attorneys are active members of our community. It?s our way of giving back to the Dallas area for everything that they provide for us. We are also proud that the firm itself is active in several charitable endeavors and supports other community-enhancing events too. Along with that, several of our blog articles lately, have lauded the efforts of other groups in our community who have gone above and beyond what is normally expected of them to help out the local Dallas community. We firmly believe that bringing attention to what we and other Dallas groups do to benefit our community, it will encourage other people, businesses, and groups to do the same. It has been especially heartwarming to see so many in the Dallas area come together to help those that are struggling both mentally and financially during the ongoing virus crisis.?

According to the new blog on the website for this law firm, most of the information for the blog was inspired by a report that was broadcast on NBC/DFW channel 5. The blog pointed out that this event was much more than just a sandwich and a few snacks in a brown paper bag. It was actual ?food boxes? that were distributed to those who showed up for it. These consisted of a whole free roasted turkey, six breakfasts, six lunches, three assorted snacks, and three whole dinners. Dallas ISD has long been known for being generous by handing out free school lunches to those that might otherwise go hungry, but this food distribution even went way above and beyond that. Some of the locations where the food boxes were handed out included Benjamin Franklin International Exploratory Academy, David W. Carter High School, Moisés E. Molina High School,

South Oak Cliff High School, and the Young Women's STEAM Academy at Balch Springs Middle School. The blog post also stated that this event was not only impressive because of its scale, but there were also no preconditions for receiving the food box. Anyone who felt they had a need simply had to show up and claim a food package.

Those at the Ward Maedgen Accident Attorneys are not only proud to post blogs that are related to community events, but they offer a variety of reputable accident-related legal services too. James went on to say that they also believe in taking a more personal approach when it comes to handling personal injury claims. He says that?s why they chose to keep the firm smaller in size but he then went on to emphasize that they still deliver large size law firm results. Their success rate when it comes to litigating claims stemming from moving vehicle accidents backs this statement up. The firm?s spokesperson says that?s why so many seek them out for car, truck, and motorcycle accident injury claim representation. Other areas of legal representation that this firm has become well-known for include accidents involving brain injuries, medical malpractice, wrongful death, and premises & product liability.
