

Midway Pest Management Provides Rodent Control Services in Kansas City

December 15, 2020

December 15, 2020 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Midway Pest Management LLC, a company based in Overland Park, KS, is pleased to announce that they can provide rodent control services in the Kansas City metropolitan area and neighboring areas. Their pest control experts have all been trained to offer high quality service to ensure that all their customers are happy and satisfied, which is supported by a 100 percent customer satisfaction warranty.

The services provided by Midway Pest Management include: residential pest control, commercial pest control, rodent and wildlife control, termite control, bedbug control, and bird control. For residential pest control, they offer the protection needed by the home against common pests, including pest ants, crickets, spiders, beetles, silverfish, wasps, rodents and many other nuisance pests.

For rodent and wildlife control, they will visit the home and perform a preliminary visual inspection of certain areas, such as the attic, soffit, siding, crawlspace, vents and areas around the structure that could offer entry access for wildlife animals. Infestation by mice and rats becomes more frequent when the temperature becomes too cold or too hot. These rodents will tend to seek shelter in homes and other buildings, entering through small holes, open doors, bad door seals, and siding gaps. They tend to build their nests in attics, crawl spaces, wall-voids, air vents, furniture, and in other similar areas inside the home or building.

There are a number of indications of the presence of mice and rats. Mice tend to follow baseboards, so droppings along baseboards and walls allow the early detection of rodent infestation. Mice and rats also like to chew and gnaw on things, such as electrical wiring, walls, and furniture. They also tend to make scratching noises, especially during the night. The problem with rodents is that, aside from the damage they may cause to property, they may quickly contaminate surfaces and ambient air, possibly resulting into respiratory problems and diseases. Another important pest control service offered is termite control. This is vital because termites usually live in wooden structures and such structures in the home can get damaged by termites, severely weakening them, which means that the house structure is at risk. In the Midwest, it is the Eastern Subterranean Termite that is commonly found in wooden structures. The state certified pest control technicians from Midway Pest Management LLC will conduct a preliminary termite inspection of the wooden structures in a home or building to detect the presence of active termites, old or abandoned termite shelter tubes, and termite-related damage.

If termites are present, termite treatment will be suggested, but if no termites are found, they will recommend prevention services. Treatments that can be provided include total termite baiting treatment or spot liquid treatments. Possible treatments include a comprehensive termite baiting treatment service or spot liquid treatments.

With regards to bed bugs, they will first determine the level of infestation and then lay out a course of action to eliminate the bed bugs. Bed bug services include: chemical residual treatment; remedial heat treatment; or fumigation. Choosing the appropriate bed bug service type for a specific home will require a bed bug inspection.

Meanwhile, certain birds may be considered as pests. These birds may be a hazard to families and employees. Bird droppings may carry diseases. And birds may also build their nests inside dryer vents, bathroom vents, and exhaust vents. These can impede normal air flow in the home or building, and the vents may also get damaged by the birds. Midway Pest Management LLC has wildlife management team members for proper bird removal from vents, installation of vent guards, and other related services.
