December 2020, Bluffton, SC - With the new normal, now is the time for solo attorneys or law firms to re-evaluate their marketing strategies and explore relevant digital options, says Bluffton-based Vanguard Legal Marketing. The Expert Online Advertising company says that lawyers must look into new ways to connect with their potential clients.

One effective way attorneys should consider is paid advertising. Paid advertising is not a set-it-forget-it form of marketing but instead drives an instant gain. With paid advertising, a lawyer, or a law firm gains instant traffic to their website. It also helps generate immediate inbound calls for new business.

However, Vanguard Legal Marketing says to be successful, paid digital media must be used correctly. "We need to understand how it is best used to drive real-time results while, at the same time, improving organic search results for the long-term," Vanguard Legal Marketing explains.

According to Vanguard Legal Marketing, Google offers two ways for a law firm's ads to be displayed and billed. The first is Pay-per-click (PPC), while the other is pay per 1,000 impressions (CPM).
