December 28, 2020 -
Paradise Valley, AZ-based Alpha Therapeutics, LLC is pleased to announce that they offer Cannabidiol (CBD) to help ease chronic pain. The company is currently taking new orders.

CBD is a naturally occurring plant compound that can be found in the flower of cannabis, which has a rich history of being used for medical purposes that goes back thousands of years. Scientists and doctors all over the world are now testing and confirming CBD?s therapeutic properties. CBD should not be confused with Tetrahydrocannabinol (THC), however, which is the compound that causes the ?high? that cannabis is famous for. CBD itself does not cause this same sensation, but there are CBD products that may also contain THC. They are called full spectrum CBD products. The products that Alpha Therapeutics offers are broad spectrum CBD (that do not contain any THC) to make sure that their clients are not impaired by their products.

CBD is the wellness product of the moment and has been made legal in all 50 states, according to the 2018 Farm Bill. It has a wide range of potential benefits that are helpful for dealing with stress, anxiety, depression, epilepsy, pain and inflammation. CBD is generally considered safe but it is not completely regulated at the federal level by the government. The CBD industry has also been faster than the scientific community, making claims regarding health benefits that have yet to be fully analyzed. As such, those planning to use

CBD need to be responsible in doing so, and the first step in being a responsible user is knowing how CBD works.

The human body contains a complex biological system known as the endocannabinoid system. Experts have not fully discovered what this system does, but they have found out that it affects many major processes (such as appetite, sleep, mood and memory). This system has three components: receptors, enzymes and endocannabinoids. The body contains many receptors where endocannabinoids bind, but there are two types of main receptors. One is responsible for governing coordination, movement, pain, appetite, memory, mood and other functions. The other affects pain and inflammation. Enzymes break down endocannabinoids to bind with the receptors.

It is believed that CBD does not bind directly to receptors but influences it in some manner. This is what leads to the many health benefits that are associated with CBD. In fact, experts believe that it influences non-cannabinoid receptors, such as the fifth serotonin receptor and the TRPV1 receptor. These receptors are helpful for dealing with psychotic disorders as well as pain and inflammation, respectively. When CBD influences the TRPV1 receptors, it blocks pain signals and prevents them from travelling to the rest of the body. This effectively helps people avoid pain and discomfort from aches and swelling. Those who have concerns about CBD are advised to consult their doctors for more insight.

One of the products that Alpha Therapeutics offers is the CBD pain stick. This allows people to rub CBD directly to painful areas and allow it to be absorbed quickly through the skin so pain relief can be achieved. The CBD pain stick is portable and easy to use. Innovations such as these have led to Alpha Therapeutics receiving great reviews for their products.

T. Terry says in a 5-Star Google review, ?Fantastic product with excellent customer service! I have been using the Alpha System 1000 CBD full spectrum oil for several months. It has helped me a lot! I suffer chronic spine pain, migraines, neuropathy throughout my body and anxiety. Since starting this oil, I immediately noticed improvement with my anxiety, followed by noticeable relief of many of my pains. It helps a lot, and I highly recommend this yummy-tasting oil for whatever ails you. Geoff is such a great person to interact with ? he makes sure I get my orders on time! Thank you, Alpha Therapeutics!?

F. Russell says in another 5-Star Google review, ?I have long been suffering from Peripheral Vascular Disease (PVD). Due to the restricted blood flow to my legs, my feet fall asleep and makes keeping my balance very difficult, causing even more stress to my legs, which creates a great deal of pain. Nothing I have tried has given me any relief, until Vanessa Lighty from Alpha Therapeutics introduced me to System 1000 Cannabidiol Oil. Since I started taking System 1000, the pain is virtually gone, and my mobility has improved 100%. I would urge anyone with chronic pain or any other disorder to try this product. I promise it will help!?
