Morgan MacLean Realty, based in Grande Prairie, AB, Canada, has announced that founder Morgan MacLean has recently been featured in a top agent magazine. Real estate was a second career for MacLean, who was a professional hockey player before that. Originally from Grande Prairie, he decided to make that area the focus of his new career, and has been successful in that field ever since.

"I was trained to act professional, look professional and be professional at all times," says Morgan MacLean. "As athletes we were always under the microscope and that is how I conduct myself as a realtor as well. I enjoy wearing a suit. I'm young, ambitious, honest and extremely competitive."

The article in the magazine explains how Morgan first co-founded Realty Grande Prairie. He then sold his shares after selling 140 homes in just one year. Following this, he was brought on by RE/MAX. He feels that he is the ideal person for the job, as he focuses specifically on Grande Prairie, which is his own community as well. Keeping an excellent reputation, therefore, is vital to his own success.

MacLean is also focused on modern technology, but keeps a personal touch. For instance, while he has a well-developed website, he refuses to use auto email, which he finds impersonal. Instead, he speaks with his client face to face, over coffee or dinner. He loves the personal touch and this is what has made him stand out from the crowd. This is something that he explains himself: "I believe that anything you put your heart into, you should fully commit yourself to, and I do that with my clients."

MacLean feels that the work he does is incredibly rewarding and allows him to make a meaningful difference to his community. This has been noticed, because he has not only been featured in the top agent magazine, he has also been included on the RE/MAX top 100 list in Western Canada, the youngest agent to have ever achieved that at just 26 years old. Considering that he often carries as many as 47 listings, this is hardly surprising.
