While they are focused on offering the best possible HVAC service to all of their customers in the area, they are also keen on ensuring that their prices are reasonable. They are able to accomplish all that by choosing the best people for their HVAC team, ensuring that they are highly knowledgeable and skilled in all aspects of HVAC maintenance, repair, and installation. And the company employs a quality audit program to make sure that customers are 100 percent satisfied.

The most prevalent type of HVAC system in Canada is the split system central air conditioning system. It is called a ?split system? because it has an indoor unit and an outdoor unit. It has an evaporator coil in the indoor unit and its blower motor circulates the ?conditioned? air through the ductwork of the home. For homes that don?t have a ductwork or a ductwork cannot be installed because it will destroy the aesthetics of the home, a split ductless system may be used. In the ductless system, the indoor evaporator unit and the outside condenser unit are connected through a tubing that is used to circulate refrigerant. The professional AC technicians from AC Repair Mississauga are experienced in the repair, maintenance, and installation of these systems.

The HVAC specialist can also help the family determine the appropriate size of the HVAC system for the home. It is important to have the correct size of HVAC system for the home because if it is too small, it will have a hard time keeping up with the requirements of the home and will likely get damaged earlier than usual aside from not being able to offer the kind of comfort that is required. On the other hand, if it is too large for the home, it will waste a lot of energy.

In determining the correct size, the HVAC specialist will base it on the specific requirements of the family; the kind of climate where the home is located; the orientation of the home; the size and age of the windows; the age of the house; the quality and quantity of insulation in the home; and the ventilation system and ductwork of the home.
