January 12, 2021 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Pride Restoration Of NC, a water damage company in Wilmington, North Carolina, is pleased to announce that they are offering professional restoration services to the local community. The company has served the region for over 30 years and has provided both residential and commercial water damage restoration to numerous households and businesses.

The team at Pride Restoration has the experience to guide a client through the total process, from an initial inspection to total restoration. The company also works with a client's insurance provider in order to ensure that the process is as smooth as possible. They are prepared and capable of handling any water damage repair problem, no matter the size, and offer clean-up and restoration services as well.

One of the main services offered by Pride Restoration involves them taking care of structural drying caused by water. The team can handle water damage in a small room, entire home or even a commercial building. The company also offers contents drying, acknowledging that some memories are just too important to be discarded. Their content drying service is designed to safely remove water and mold from personal effects (which may range from furniture to photo albums and so on). Pride Restoration offers specialty drying as well, a service which focuses on hardwood flooring, concrete, confined spaces and crawl spaces, which are notoriously difficult to dry. Fortunately, the company's specialty drying services ensures that all of the water will be removed from these areas. The company also offers emergency services, for situations where one may need to vacate their home temporarily. The company will provide building and window board-up, tarp-over and temporary electricity for extreme situations. Clients may expect expert assistance with repair and restoration after clean-up, and this helps ensure that a home or business may eventually go back to normal ? as if the water damage never happened.

The company's certified technicians are capable of identifying the best drying solution to suit a client's specific needs. At Pride, the team understands that it can be overwhelming and confusing to try and find a water damage restoration company while also dealing with a flooding emergency or sewage backup. It is with this in mind that the company keeps their water cleanup services easy to navigate, and they are always prepared to answer a client's questions.

The repair and restoration process for water damage is not as simple as cleaning an area until one cannot see any more water. As a company that specializes in water removal, the team must first determine where, why, and how water damage began in the building. The team will then create a custom water damage remediation process in order to best protect one's property. The company tackles the process in several steps. The first step is to gather information about the client and property when the client calls requesting the company's services. The company will then send a team to inspect the problem and take immediate action to stop any leaking water and prevent further damage.

Step 3 involves water removal, which is done through a combination of pumps, wet vacuums and sponges in order to remove any standing water. The team will also remove any wet furniture, carpeting and soaked materials in order to speed up the drying process. The next step is to dry and dehumidify the property. This is done using powerful blowers and fans on the wet areas to assist with drying and evaporation. Dehumidifiers and evaporators are then used to draw any remaining moisture out and prevent further issues like mold. The final step is repair and restoration. Once the property is cleaned, the team will work to reconstruct drywall, electrical wiring and so on. They will also install new plumbing, flooring and more in order to restore the property to its former status.

The company offers a wide range of services in addition to water damage restoration. The company also offers mold removal and testing, sewage cleanup, fire and smoke damage restoration, flood damage clean-up and storm recovery. While providing their services to residential properties in Wilmington, Pride Restoration of NC also offers services for properties which need commercial restoration, construction and remodeling. Ever conscious of the needs of the community, the company has made it a point to offer green cleaning, contents cleaning and even odor removal services.
