National Restoration Experts is a full-service disaster mitigation company that operates out of Pompano Beach Florida. One of the areas they have invested in substantially over the last few years is fire damage Pompano Beach. This includes advanced training for their employees and state of the art fire cleanup equipment. This has allowed them to offer more fire damage restoration services to those in Pompano Beach and the surrounding communities than ever before.

The company's president and owner, Joe Hernandez, says, "There are few disasters that are more devastating to a household mentally and financially than those that have suffered through a house fire. That's because many times the fire not only destroys valuable items but also destroys many family keepsakes that can't be replaced. We have witnessed the sadness that goes along with this firsthand too many times. That's what has inspired me to invest heavily in many different fire restoration services. If we can salvage even a few keepsakes for fire victims or a significant portion of their homes, then we have already started to help these families put their lives back together again. No amount of money that we make doing our jobs can replace the feeling that this gives us."

Hernandez went on to talk about what the many residential and commercial fire damage repair services that they offer are all about. He says the first step in any fire damage restoration process is the assessment and estimate generation phase. Then they will move quickly to remove all of the contents and furniture in the impacted areas of a home or building to salvage as much as possible. The water that was used to douse the fire on the property will also have to be removed quickly. This carries with it its own set of disaster restoration problems if this step is not carried out as soon as possible.

According to Hernandez, another important aspect of their fire damage restoration Pompano Beach FL services is those that deal with the damage that's caused by smoke from a fire. He says their smoke damage cleanup services are vital because even small fires can cause extensive smoke damage to a home or business. This also includes the cleanup of any soot that is present on walls, floors, and ceilings. The company owner says that they even have advanced cleaning procedures that they use to help eliminate the foul odor that often accompanies structure fires. If the property is un-occupiable, they will also board-up and secure the property each day when leaving and the companies crews are extremely gifted when they lead the reconstruction effort after someone has suffered fire damage to their property. All of National Restoration Experts fire damage restoration services can be taken advantage of 24/7, 365 and Hernandez says they will even help their customers with any related insurance claims. He says they are dedicated to helping their fire restoration customers in any way that the company can to get their lives back in order just as quickly as possible.

Those who have used National Restoration Experts fire restoration services have been very pleased with the service they have received from the company. Vanessa Figaro stated, "Anees was wonderful to work with! He was always available for any questions or concerns I had. My home was restored quickly and looks great! I would definitely use this company again!" John Marino wrote, "It was a pleasure dealing with National Restoration Experts through my entire renovation process.
