

Service To Find Trusted Emergency Electricians Launched

September 17, 2015

September 17, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Your Electricians, a business in Kensington, London, United Kingdom, has announced the addition of a new service that allows people throughout the country to find trusted electricians. They have compiled a national list of electricians of whom they have checked credentials and customer reviews, thereby enabling others to find the electrician that is most suitable to them, especially during emergencies. Full details can be found on <http://www.yourelectricians.co.uk>.

"Too often, we hear horror stories when it comes to professionals like electricians and others who enter people's homes," says Andy Hawke from Your Electricians. "Unfortunately, the reality is that unsavory characters will often use fake credentials to gain access to someone's home. While people can protect themselves from this to some degree, such as checking someone's ID before they allow them to come in, this isn't enough. We want to make sure that people can find electricians that are not only good at their job, but also can be allowed into a home without worries."

Your Electricians has already checked many parts of the UK for electricians who can truly be trusted. People are encouraged to visit their website and choose the town or city closest to them to find electricians in their area that they can trust. Each of the companies listed in the service areas has been fully vetted.

"We also encourage electricians to contact us if they want to be listed on our website," adds Andy Hawke. "We will then go through a process of checking their credentials and making sure they are positively reviewed by their clients. If everything checks out, they will be listed on our site, ready to be found by prospective customers."

The service provided has been welcomed across the country. It is helping people feel safer in their homes, particularly when it comes to allowing others to come in. It is hoped that a similar service will be provided for other types of contractors. These include painters, decorators, landscape gardeners, plumbers, and more. By listing which professionals can be trusted, people can feel safe in having work done on their properties.
