New York, NY-based Rooms In The City, a student housing provider, is reaching out to the wider community to share survival tips for anyone currently living in student housing in New York. The company is dedicated to providing exclusive student apartments and rooms in New York City. More information about Rooms In The City and the services they provide can be found at the following link: Student Housing Near Me.

Harry Jeanty, a representative for Rooms In The City Inc, says, "Whether you are a local student, from out of the city or a complete foreigner to the country, finding student housing can be a long and painful process. Then, once you've found it, adapting to the new lifestyle and dealing with all the problems and pitfalls associated with student housing is a whole new challenge. As a company that helps students find good student housing in New York City, we feel it's part of our responsibility to help these students adapt to the new environment, and we do everything we can in pursuit of this goal."

According to Jeanty, the first and most important survival tip for students looking to live in student housing in New York is to find the right neighbourhood. New York is a large city, and while there are many neighbourhoods around the city, not all of them will be ideal for everyone. Students need to consider factors that include their budget, commute distance and safety concerns when they seek student housing to ensure that everything that comes afterwards is relatively easy to deal with.

Second, Jeanty also suggests that finding a roommate can be very useful in the long run. Not only will having a roommate help with the high living and rental costs in New York, but it also provides someone students can socialize and interact with on a daily basis. Since student life can get hectic, socializing can be very hard ? even though making time for socializing is important ? and in such times, having someone to talk to in one's room can go a long way.

For those who do want to socialize and are not sure where to start, Jeanty says that getting involved in school activities can be of great help. As schools offer a variety of clubs and organizations, everyone can find something that they like and join in, which will give them access to a number of like minded individuals with common interests who make a great starting point for socializing. Be it with a roommate or with other friends, spending time away from the books and one's room is quite important to maintain mental health. However, students should keep in mind that they need to find the right balance between entertainment and education. Jeanty says, "New York City is a wonderful place, no doubt about it, and despite the relatively high expenses, it has a lot to offer for students – both local and otherwise. Learn the bus routes and the subway, explore the city, try new things. You'll find that being a student in NYC is a fantastic experience."

The services provided by Rooms In The City Inc have earned them good reviews from their users. Molly Crane says in her Google review, "I'm an international French student who was in need of a room ASAP. First time traveling to NYC and had no place to go and little time to settle before classes started. During my search, I came across an ad for Rooms In The City. I saw pictures of a room I liked, and I was able to book a room online in less than 30 min. I was a bit skeptical, so I called them. The representative walked me through the steps for booking online. On the day I arrived, I was met by an agent with keys and a tour of the place. This company is legit, and I use them every time I visit NYC. The only thing is that they rent for 3 months or longer. No less than 3 months. Also there is no fee to rent in Brooklyn. All you need is one month's rent and one month's security deposit. They also have rooms in Manhattan."
