September 17, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Steps Recovery Center, a drug rehabilitation center in Utah, has announced that they now offer rehabilitation services that are affordable. They feel that addiction is a whole family affair and that people in the entire family should not have to continue to live - or die - with addiction simply because they cannot afford treatment. They encourage anyone who is facing addiction problems to contact them as soon as possible.

"Too often, we hear of people who simply carry on with their addiction or looking after a relative with an addiction because treatment is out of their reach," says Mike Jorgensen from Steps Recovery Center. "Addiction affects the entire family, however, and it simply isn't fair that this should be allowed to continue due to financial difficulties. We are very proud, therefore, to offer a service that is not just of high quality, but is affordable as well."

Those who are wondering why Steps Recovery Center would be right for them are asked to visit the center's website. Full details are provided on the site, including the fact that they offer all levels of care. Furthermore, they focus strongly on family treatment. According to Steps, addiction is a symptom of underlying problems and they believe these problems have to be addressed as well. This is generally a whole family affair.

The Utah alcohol rehab center offers a free consultation. "We want to encourage anyone who is current dealing with addiction, be that through their own behavior or that of a relative, to contact us," adds Mike Jorgensen. "We will discuss the treatment options that are available, why we make certain recommendations and how the treatment can be financed at that point. This consultation is completely no obligation, but we hope it will show people that help is out there for them and that this will encourage them to take the first step towards recovery."

Addiction is something that affects all levels of society and has a devastating effect on individuals, families and entire communities. Providing help to affected people is vital to the improvement of the world as a whole. Steps Recovery Center strives play a role in that.
