Pembroke Pines, Florida - January 22, 2021 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

EPS Landscaping & Tree Service would like its customers and others in the Broward County area of Florida to know when it's time to consider removing one or more trees in their yard. Most of the time this is done to trees that have the potential to become a hazard or when removing a tree will benefit overall landscape health. They also want to remind people that tree removal can be a dangerous undertaking if not done properly. That's why it's best left to professionals like them that have the equipment and experience that's necessary to take down trees safely.

Greg O'Connell, the co-founder of the company, says, "Being tree care professionals, we never like to see trees come down. They offer so many benefits such as supplying and filtering the air that we breathe. Not to mention, trees provide natural windbreaks that protect homes and buildings during strong storms and greatly improve the looks of any landscape when they are kept properly trimmed. With that being said, sometimes taking one or more trees down on your property can be proactive and beneficial."

The company's co-founder went on to say that the most common reason that they undertake tree removal is to eliminate trees that are starting to pose a risk to people or property. This includes trees that are growing too close to homes, garages, buildings, and power lines. He added that many people also call them to remove trees when big storms are approaching the area. This is what the experts at the company refer to as hazard tree removal. O'Connell said trees that fit into this category are dead and dying trees that can easily come down when high winds hit an area. It was also mentioned by him that sometimes they undertake tree removal because it benefits the health of other trees and plant life in a landscape. This includes felling trees to stop the spread of disease or when a yard has become overrun with too many large trees that now dominate the consumption of beneficial air, sunlight, and moisture that all plants in a landscape need to thrive.

According to O'Connell, other times that home and business owners want to use their expert tree removal service is when they have a tree that is showing obvious signs of having a weakened structure. These would be trees that are leaning badly as they grow, show cracks in the larger branches, or have trunks with big hollowed out sections. He went on to add that one of the lesser-known reasons for tree removal but still important, is when the root structure of large trees becomes invasive. This can cause damage to sidewalks, driveways, foundations, and more.

For those who think they may have a tree on their Pompano Beach or other Broward County property that needs to come down but are unsure, O'Connell says that it's best to let the experts like them make that decision. That will avoid any trees being taken down needlessly. He says that when he meets with a customer to discuss tree removal, he is always more than happy to answer any questions or concerns that they have. The company co-founder went on to say that there are other benefits that customers get from using their tree removal services too. This includes all of the specialized equipment that's necessary to remove the stump after a tree has been felled. He stated that this is important if a customer once to totally reclaim the ground area where a tree once stood so it can be used for other purposes. EPS Landscaping & Tree Service even has branch chippers, chainsaws, and trailers available to do a thorough cleanup after a tree has been brought down.

Other services this reputable Pompano Beach area landscaping and tree service company offers include tree trimming, irrigation, landscape design & installation, hardscaping, and a variety of lawn care services.
