January 21, 2021 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

A Local tree service company in Riverside, CA, Riverside Tree Service, suggests that homeowners consider pruning their trees before the spring season. Trees lay dormant in the winter season and no development occurs during this time. Homeowners can take advantage of the dormant stage when trees are conserving their energy until time to create new development in the spring. Right now is a good time for tree maintenance service to prevent hurting new tree growth and development as the weather begins to warm as we approach the spring season. Riverside Tree Service is making it easier for homeowners who may be new to their service try them out by offering discounted services on their tree trimming, tree removal, and arborist service for a limited time.

A lot of deciduous trees are best pruned when inactive, in late autumn or winter. Do not prune in early spring, as numerous trees bleed sap if cut at this time of year. The exceptions to the 'deciduous tree' rule are maple, horse chestnut, birch, walnut and cherry trees which all bleed extensively, even towards the end of their inactive season, so prune these in mid-summer after brand-new growth has actually occurred.

Keep in mind, while it may be tempting for some homeowners to maintenance their own trees, not all jobs are easy as they may appear. Company Representative, Linda Blanco, puts it like this, "Chainsaw work and any pruning which is substantial, high, inaccessible, or requires a ladder, should be done by a qualified and registered expert, both for personal safety and also for the long-term health of the tree. We take care of the tree health, tree appearance, and if trees have to be got to be removed, we are the tree service in Riverside residents can call."
