The videos let viewers find out what measures are being put in place to accommodate guests' experience and safety after the pandemic such as cleaning, social distancing, limited capacity of guests on resorts or coach tours, and more. The videos also serve to decrease misinformation about the travel industry during the pandemic by hearing firsthand from people on location about what's going on in the travel world. The videos help travelers acquire the required information for choosing when will be the right time to travel again, according to their comfort levels.

The videos feature a series of guests that have an intimate knowledge of the service industry. The featured guests care about the luxury travel experience and only share the most accurate and helpful information that will make the trip easy for the travelers. The list of guests includes general managers of high-end Caribbean beach resorts. One of the brands that are often sold by the agents of Travel Time - TPI, Sandals, is featured due to its high-quality service and superior customer feedback. Sandals has been rated as the world's best for over 20 years.

Lois Barbour, the owner of Travel Time - TPI, comments, "we're used to groups of all shapes and sizes that travel for many different reasons. While there are fewer people traveling since early last year, people are anxiously looking forward to the opportunity to travel again- they want to know when they'll be able to travel again. This depends on many factors including government regulations, travel restrictions, cleanliness protocols, and each traveller's comfort level. We can help you find a trip that custom fits your needs and book for whenever you would like to travel. In consideration of the fact that a lot of people simply aren't ready to travel, many cruise lines and resorts have very flexible options for re-scheduling or even cancelling your trip if you don't feel comfortable to travel as the date approaches."

Lois also says that "at Travel Time - TPI we have a commitment to service excellence through ongoing education and training, and we always stay up to date on the most recent news because we sense the responsibility of helping travellers get the most value for their travel budget, but also for travelling when conditions are appropriate to do so. The live video series we've done is a clear example of that. We hope people can explore destinations with us through our interviews with key people in the industry, and then we can help them look at what booking options are available for the future, when the time is right to travel again.?"

A review of the service by Chantelle Evans says, "We planned on traveling with a large group (43 by the end) and everything from making the initial booking, handling the website, keeping guests updated, making sure everyone had the right documents and was well aware of things to pack and possibly expect (we had many travelers who have never left Canada before).?"

The videos can be viewed on the Travel Talk Thursdays playlist on Travel Time - TPI's youtube channel.
