Here in New York, driving while intoxicated is a crime. But there are varying degrees of alcohol and drug-related charges, all with different charging criteria and penalties. What you are charged and convicted of will determine what your penalties are and what ultimately happens to your license.?

DUI or DWI charges are known for their complex character and require a lot of attentiveness and know-how in order to defend an individual facing charges under New York law.

Jason Bassett goes on to explain: ?For a DWI first offense, you face a revocation lasting 6 months. For any subsequent DWI within 10 years, the revocation lasts at least 18 months. Aggravated DWI carries a license revocation of 1 year with revocations of at least 18 months for a 2nd or 3rd Aggravated DWI within 10 years. For a first-time DWAI (Alcohol), there is a suspension for 90 days but for another DWAI within 10 years your driver?s license is revoked for at least 6 months.?
