Locked-Out Locksmiths Provides Information On How To Maintain a Burglar Proof Residence

London, UK ? It's time to make sure the house is burglar proof. To help London residents out with this, Locked-out LockSmiths (www.lockedout-locksmiths.co.uk) has just published a new blog post authored by Brendan Connolly entitled 'Keys to Burglary Prevention That your London Locksmith Should Tell You'.

The article discusses what things to check and insure against burglary that many often overlook or just don't think to check.

?Making your home an easy target in the first place should never be an option,? states Connolly. ?Never take any chances when it comes to home security. Being too paranoid is far more helpful than being accommodating enough to let a burglar in without you being the wiser.?

Connolly's advice is derived directly from his experience as a locksmith and from other professional locksmiths, specialising in both residential and business security. The article relates further how to check letter box security, especially if it's located in the door, securing of doors, patio doors and windows and even French doors. Specifically, the article points out that the Metropolitan Police website suggests securing any

French doors in a home by having 'Both doors fitted with mortice rack bolts (bolts fitted within the door and operated internally by a threaded key). Having them be fitted at a 90 ° angle to the grain of the wood, and using surface-mounted locking bolts (push to lock, key to open)'.

?A potential burglar can easily gain access to your home should he choose to stick his hand inside the box,? states Connolly. ?A trusted locksmith like those at Locked-out Locksmiths can reinforce any type of door or window that might serve as a potential entryway for burglars.?
