About Bunting has announced that their printed products have been used for a number of national promotional campaigns for large retailers, major festivals, and corporate events that want to showcase their brands and products. The printing company, which is based in Maroochydore, Queensland, has been Australia's specialist bunting manufacturer and supplier since 1983.

"Our printed bunting is made and printed locally. It is not imported and the quality is far superior to other products on the market," states company spokesperson Barbara Roskvist.

All of the printed products of the company can be shipped hassle free throughout Australia, New Zealand, and the Pacific. About Bunting specializes in custom printed orders and provides anything from a minimum of 50 meter print runs to hundreds of thousands of meters.

In correlation to their use in national promotional campaigns, they have recently experienced their largest single order to date, which is a fact that the company is proud of. Barbara Roskvist states, "We're excited to be branching out and seeing an expansion of our services."

The company provides a number of products that are used on motorway construction sites, land development projects, mine sites, and for other organizations, offering site contractors the dual benefits of displaying safety messages and advertising their logos for public recognition and market kudos. Barbara Roskvist also pointed out that their bunting flags are a favorite of private schools displaying school emblems and promoting a sense of community and school pride, on both backstroke flags and bunting for school sports and community events.

In working with government and private sectors, the company offers a range of options to ensure that all customer needs are met. Barbara Roskvist explained that since health and safety requirements are an essential operating expense for most organizations, the company ensures that they transform this necessary cost into an opportunity by promoting the contractor, business, or development to everyone who sees it, which enables them to provide services for larger corporations as well as government agencies.

More about the company, including a complete list of the products that they provide, can be seen on their official website.
