The Art of Dentistry, a San Diego dental clinic, is reaching out to help their local community become familiar with the benefits of dental implants. They are also encouraging local residents to visit their website for more information as it provides insight on the reasons to consider implants and the benefits as well as dental issues which may result in needing implants. The clinic serves the Pacific Beach and Mission Valley areas in the state of California.

One?s smile is an important part of a first impression, the clinic observes. It has also been shown that a majority of people are more likely to trust a person who has a nice smile. An imperfect smile can therefore be a noticeable disadvantage. Dental implants can provide a person with the solution to remedy missing or chipped teeth, and they represent a first step towards achieving a flawless smile and feeling more confident.

Dental implants are artificial teeth that provide a permanent solution to missing or damaged teeth. They are rooted into the bone by a titanium post that provides a base and the structure for a ceramic crown. The first stage involves a frame which is attached to the jawbone below the missing tooth. This provides the individual with a base that is secure and stable for the missing tooth. The implant is then attached. This artificial tooth ensures that the person has the same functionality, feeling and appearance as they would with a real tooth. An additional benefit is that it is a long-lasting solution.

According to the San Diego dentist, such implants are an investment that can provide an individual with a host of benefits. A person can gain renewed confidence, for instance. To quote the clinic, ?You?ll feel better than ever with your new smile and never have to stress about hiding your teeth around new people or keeping your lips tight during photos.? The second benefit is that the dental implants give the same appearance as all the other teeth and can restore a person?s full smile.

Though aesthetic benefits are important, implants also provide many functional benefits. One such benefit is being able to eat and speak normally. Damaged or missing teeth are capable of affecting one?s speech in ways that one would not realize. Missing or damaged teeth can also make it a habit for a person to avoid chewing with certain areas of their mouth. Dental implants can be a solution to both problems (as opposed to a person having to adapt to the issue). Dental implants can also reduce the risk of further tooth loss. Missing and damaged teeth can lead to more serious complications, like infections and a range of other health issues.

Dental implants can help prevent other health risks caused by damaged or missing teeth. For one, implants would help stop the progression of bone loss since dental bone often shrinks as one loses one?s teeth. An implant?s presence can help maintain the structure of the bone. The process of bone renewal is stimulated by chewing forces as they are transferred through the implant to the bone. Implants can also revitalize one?s oral health. The longer a person may go with missing teeth, the greater the risk of their oral health becoming even worse. On top of this, bad oral health can have effects on other areas of one?s body and is not necessarily isolated to the mouth. As implants can improve oral health, they in turn can be beneficial to one?s overall health. The Art of Dentistry clinic (dental implants san diego) specializes in dental implants which are custom-made to suit the needs of each patient.
