

Reputable Electricians San Antonio Announce a New Website Launch and a Changing of the Guard

March 02, 2021

March 02, 2021 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Good Electric San Antonio, TX recently made some very big announcements. This includes the fact that there will be an ownership change and along with that a new website will be launched. Despite all this, the new owner says that their customers can still look forward to this family-owned and locally-operated business providing them with top-notch electrical services. Their licensed and insured staff electricians will continue being dedicated to doing the exceptional work that has made the company one of the highest-rated electrical services in its part of Texas.

The new owner and former general manager, Mike Varnum, says, "These are both some sad and exciting times here at our company. All of us will be sad to see Larry go. He was an excellent mentor and leader for our company for so many years. Out of respect for that, there will be no name change for the reputable electric company that he worked so hard to build. We wish him well and hope he enjoys the downtime he will now have after spending so many long days meeting his many customers' home and business electrical needs. We will continue to perform our San Antonio electric services with the same passion and dedication that Larry did."

Varnum went on to say that he has so much respect for his former boss. Larry Good started his electric company back in 1984. That amounts to some 36 years that Good gave all that he had to his business and the customers that he served. He says that in the time that he worked with Good he was always one to keep looking forward and never look back. It was also mentioned that Good had discussed with him several times in 2020 that he was seriously considering retirement. He added that a new website was in the works long before he knew that Good was going to retire for sure. Good also ran the business in a very progressive manner and having a new and more user-friendly web resource for their customers is in keeping with that tradition.

The new owner went on to say that they still will be providing Residential, Commercial, and industrial services to those in San Antonio and the surrounding areas. This includes such South Texas areas as Boerne, Bulverde, New Braunfels, and the nearby Hill Country. He stated that their licensed electricians at Good Electric can handle all sorts of electrical work. That includes wiring anything from a parking lot to a new building. Varnum also added that their customer service will still be maintained at a high level and that they will continue to be respectful of their customers' premises when doing electrical work for them. Their professional electricians in San Antonio are also uniformed and issued a picture badge to give their customers additional peace-of-mind.

Varnum also brought up the fact that safety will still be the number one reason to hire their experienced electricians. They realize that misused, overloaded, damaged, or improperly maintained electrical equipment are common causes of fires both in the workplace and in homes. He says that their talented electricians have the experience to recognize and correct such situations as circuits, fuses, and outlets that have become overloaded. He says that their electricians also will happily replace cords and wires that are frayed or worn when they are working and explain to their customers why they should not leave cords coiled up when they are plugged in. They will also recommend to their customers that extension cords only be used for temporary power supply purposes.

The new owner has also pledged that his company will continue doing the type of work that has inspired 5-star reviews such as the following. David King wrote, "Excellent customer service and pricing. Very professional and efficient. Military discount. Quick responding. Will use them again. Very pleased with the overall experience." Karen Mannheimer stated, "A company that is as good as their name. I needed to hardwire a doorbell and they did a great job. Their crew is professional and courteous. Honest price and they stand behind their work. I will use them again and highly recommend!"
