Destin, Fla. ? Over the last year, the travel industry has seen unprecedented changes in the way they operate and the forecast of how they will continue to thrive. Travelers across the country often seem to find themselves caught in this uncertainty as mixed information fills social media timelines and news headlines. Expert Destin travel agency, Have Travel Memories Vacations, recognizes this struggle and, in an effort to help combat it, has decided to start sharing their expertise via a new web-based podcast.

Hosted by Paul Stadden, JoDell Haverfield, Jason Haverfield, and Jalayne Haverfield, the team at Have Travel Memories gather a couple of times a month to exchange advice and success stories on their growing YouTube channel. With this strategy, the team believes that they can help more and more travelers feel at ease traveling again safely when the time arises.

While the podcast is still in its infancy, the team of experts has already begun to cover a wide variety of travel-related topics. In the first episode of the show, the group discusses how they got started following their passion for travel and how that passion turned into a highly rated travel company. They also offer advice on how traveling families can help strengthen their familial ties for a lifetime. In the following episode, the Haverfields? take their years of expertise and share how travelers can make the most rental properties, delayed cruise bookings, and insider tips and tricks.

?I?m hoping to motivate my viewers to ant to travel in the future, don?t be afraid, and don?t give up,? says owner JoDell Haverfield in the show. ?It?s worth planning something that you can look forward to. I?m encouraging people to start planning their trips now, even if they don?t book it now.?
