Chicago, Illinois - March 09, 2021 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Apart from dating, positive singles can join a community of like-minded people on MeetPositives

Meet Positives provides a dynamic dating platform aimed at giving people living with lifelong infections a chance to love and be loved. The site offers great STD dating services accompanied by a community platform where members can share information about their infections and about life in general.

According to a recent STD blog post, "As the 2018 report revealed, more Americans are being diagnosed with STDs every day. At any given nightclub, an average of four to six people have an STD, including HSV-1, or oral herpes that causes cold sores on the mouth and lips, or HSV-2, genital herpes. Some of those individuals disclose their STD-positive status to sexual partners, but others aren't even aware they have a disease. That contributes to the increasing number of STD-positive daters."

The article further stated, "In the 10 years since MeetPositives launched, it has grown in both membership and popularity. Singles living with STDs may also use the website as a support community. MeetPositives gives them a way to get into relationships successfully, or at least stack the cards in their favor. The platform has been a place for singles with STDs to meet each other without worrying about the stigmas they may face on other sites. The dating platform even uses the slogan, 'Never have the talk again', to show how it helps combat the shame. So many people have told me about their STD status. It breaks my heart. The problem with dating with an STD is stigma, and I'm glad our platform helps them get away from that for a while.?
