Vox Security Announces Restructure of Emergency Electrician Response Callouts

March 10, 2021

March 10, 2021 -
Vox Security Limited have today announced the new and improved restructure of their longstanding emergency response service for Electrical and alarms.

The North East serving security company have been established in Gateshead for over forty years, the family owned and hands on run business has been an important member of the community and offering a similar service for many years.

?Since the lockdowns started last march we have had to readdress the way we can offer this essential emergency assistance to our customers? said David the owner of Vox Security, ?We had to make sure that all of our staff and customers were safe whilst we carried on this important work.?

Vox Security has managed to introduce many new procedures to ensure everyone can stay safe, minimise the risk of catching or transferring Covid and still being able to work efficiently and provide the professional service that their customers have come to expect.

Vox Security has also used this time to train their electricians on new technology that has become an essential weapon in the fight against covid, last year they introduced two new services, the first is a traffic light system that counts the number of people that enter and exit a building, the other is a fever detection screening thermal camera. Both have proved extremely popular in businesses in the north east and have helped ease the concerns about spreading the virus.

?We also offer all types of domestic and commercial electric work as well as periodic testing and inspecting. We provide a professional service that is second to none? commented David, ?All our electricians are Elecsa Approved contractors and are fully trained and qualified so you can rest assured that all work will be completed to the highest possible standards. Our engineers are part P registered, approved installers under Elecsa that is part of the ECA (Electrical Contractors Association)?.
