September 22, 2015 -
Viterbo, Italy based WeLovEat has announced the launch of the English version of their website. The company provides a food marketplace of high quality Italian foods, and now English speaking consumers can easily find the Italian foods that they want, without use of a translation site. While the monetary aspects of the site are still in Italian, those from English speaking countries can now access every page of the website and order products with descriptions clearly written in English.

A spokesperson for the company states, "We are pleased to finally have our site in English. We want our quality products to be ordered by anyone who wants them, and offering an English version of our site just made sense considering the number of people in the world who speak the language."

Consumers would be able to find a number of Italian typical products on WeLovEat. These products include Italian pasta, seasonings, drinks, cheeses, and a variety of other foods. The company has stated that their goal is to make it easier for consumers to enjoy a healthier Mediterranean diet by offering Italian foods. Mediterranean diets have been found to be healthy due to the absence of highly processed foods.

The company spokesperson states, "We offer a number of popular products, all of which have resulted from ancient tradition, and all of which are completely delicious. We want everyone in the world to be able to enjoy the healthy and wonderfully tasting foods and drinks that we in Italy have enjoyed for centuries."

The site was originally only in Italian, which made it more than a bit difficult for non-Italian consumers to find and purchase the foods that they wanted. A list of brands is offered on the site, as well as various weekly specials. The site contains an extensive catalog of products that includes food and drink choices from 45 producers and more than 280 products to date.

Those interested in learning more about the company and seeing the wide selection of Italian foods and other products that they offer, can visit them on their official website or like WeLovEat on Facebook.
