April 02, 2021 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Roper Roofing, based in Golden, Colorado, is pleased to announce that they have published a new informative blog post on their official website titled, "Can You Do Roofing Maintenance By Yourself?" As a now Community Associations Institute (CAI) Business Partner Member, the company has been serving communities in Colorado for the last 15 years.

To quote the blog post about roofing maintenance, "The best way to resolve a problem is to nip it in the bud. Unfortunately, it takes some expertise to make sure you can check all necessary areas for proper refurbishing. If you have yet to find a dependable roofing maintenance service, especially during these challenging no-contact periods season, you'll likely want to go ahead and try doing it by yourself." Over the years, the company has developed a stellar reputation within the community. With this reputation, the company hopes to spread the word about the risks of going solo on maintenance.

The Roper Roofing blog post also acknowledges that some homeowners in Colorado may be capable of performing a roof repair by themselves, particularly if they already have a ladder and other light equipment. If a homeowner wishes to do it themselves, they'll need to inspect the roof to find deteriorating shingles. Once the roofing shingles with medium to high progressive deterioration have been located, they'll need to be removed and replaced to prolong the entire roof's lifespan.

However, according to the company's blog post, inexperienced homeowners are putting themselves in danger, making it much better to have face-to-face limited services. For example, Roper Roofing's team can head to your property. Then, they can start providing you with roofing maintenance service as soon as you leave the property and stay temporarily in other residences of your choice. In doing so, you'll return to your home with zero possibility of physical contact.

Roper Roofing is aware of risks COVID-19 poses to their community. Many of the residents are elderly people in vulnerable groups. Health and safety are their number one priority not just for their valued customers but for their employees too. The company's employees follow strict social distancing guidance to protect themselves and their customers.

The company also recently became a CAI Business Partner Member. Owner of Roper Roofing Brent Roper acknowledges the company's achievement and states that "We are very pleased to have become a CAI Business Partner Member. It will not only teach us how to get more involved in supporting our local community associations. It will also allow us networking opportunities with similar and different types of companies, hence improving how we do business. These are something that we always want to be top priorities here at Roper Roofing."

The Institute provides information, education and resources to the homeowner volunteers who govern communities and also to the professionals who support them. Members include association board members and other homeowner leaders, community managers, association management firms, and professionals who provide products and services to associations as well as the local communities. The institute helps promote and establish its initiatives through activities such as conferences, seminars, workshops, and the establishment of educational programs that are aimed at community managers and industry professionals.

The CAI has established an impressive library of resources on community association management and advocates in courts of law on behalf of common-interest communities and their member industry professionals. They are also involved in researching as a means to establish best practices when it comes to developing, governing, and managing community associations. To be a member of this institute is prestigious to a local company that provides asphalt roofing in Denver.

Roper Roofing has also been the recipient of many other accolades, which include a BBB best A+ rating, a Top-Rated Local Award Winner, a GAF Master Elite Certified Contractor, and a Home Advisor Top-Rating recipient. The owner believes that the company received these awards and distinctions by being dedicated roofing specialists when it comes to residential roof replacements, roof repairs, window replacements, gutter installation, and siding repair. The company also takes pride in their crew, who are also very proficient when doing commercial roofing tasks such as the installation of EPDM, TPO, PVC, and torched-down flat roof coverings.
