Families that are planning to tour college campuses will find it easier to keep a record of their visits by using Custom College Visits' College Visit Student Journal and College Visit Parent Checklist. The College Visit Student Journal was designed for students to be able to easily record what they've seen and experienced while taking campus tours and spending time on campus. Knowing how hard it is to remember all the details of each visit, founder Janice Caine designed the document for college-bound teens with the input of high school and college students, to capture important information that can be referred to over time.

"We realized when visiting college campuses with our daughter, that there was no easy way for her to record and consolidate the information from each visit," says Janice Caine. "And since she started visiting colleges in the spring of her sophomore year, we knew we had to find a way for her to recall the details between then and application time. The College Visit Student Journal has proven to be a great record-keeping tool for students - one they can refer back to over time. We encourage any parents who are planning college visits to contact us."

The College Visit Student Journal also serves as a reminder as to what questions students should ask while on campus and what aspects of campus, such as the grounds and facilities, that they should pay attention to and be aware of. Alan Caine, co-founder of Custom College Visits, devised the College Visit Parent Checklist based on his past experience working with higher education safety directors. "There are certain questions that parents should ask about campus security, health services and financial pressures," says Alan Caine. "While these topics are not top of mind for students, they are important issues for parents to consider."
