May 14, 2021 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

University HQ, also known as University Headquarters, which is an online resource for educational research and career info, is happy to announce that they have completed the acquisition of Online MBA Review. The latter is an online resource that provides information for prospective and current Master of Business Administration (MBA) candidates. Online MBA Review offers unbiased business career information, guides on MBA concentration options, and information on becoming a leader in the current business world. The content on the site is updated regularly, which means more and more information about MBA programs and other resources and news related to earning an MBA degree.

Meanwhile, University HQ is focused on the educational market and offers detailed information regarding universities, colleges, and various degrees. They have the goal of assisting college students in planning their academic careers and, later on, with their professional lives by offering complimentary info to help them have a successful career. With their acquisition of Online MBA Review, they can now also offer more assistance by providing the right information to MBA candidates.

As for the future of Online MBA Review, University HQ plans to provide additional quality content to what is currently available from the original site. This means providing more details about what MBA students require. For example, more information about the possible concentrations that the students can pursue. At present, Online MBA Review offers information regarding a variety of concentrations such as accounting, business administration, business analytics, criminal justice, economics, entrepreneurship, executive, finance, financial planning, global management, healthcare management, hospitality management, human resources, information security, information systems, leadership, marketing, public administration, project management, and supply chain management.

For the future content of Online MBA Review, they may also focus on the expansion of higher education MBA programs in various universities and colleges. This is important because an MBA student may be thinking about pursuing about a certain concentration, but not have access to it from the particular university or college where they are enrolled. With regular updates about expansions on certain MBA programs, it may turn out that such a concentration has now become available.

University HQ's acquisition of Online MBA Review is expected to provide several advantages to both students and business professionals who want to boost their current careers. College students who want to pursue a business career can now gain information about a potential MBA course that they believe would be in line with the career that they intend to pursue upon completing college. More MBA programs have emerged recently, offering a much wider array of choices for college students and business professionals, and having these powerful online resources to guide them can make a great difference in the future success of a student.

At present, Online MBA Review provides resources and information regarding various topics dealing with MBA programs. These include admissions, accreditation, passing the GMAT and the slimmed down GMAT, paying for an MBA, hybrid MBAs, various types of MBAs, salaries, and scholarships.

Important guidance is provided by Online MBA Review regarding the admissions process for traditional MBA programs. Also available now are online MBA programs and the online resource, which explain the differences between the conventional MBA program and the online MBA program.

With regard to online MBA programs, it's important to check on their accreditation. Online MBA Review resources provide copious information regarding this matter such as what accreditation is, accreditation types, whether accrediting agencies are monitored by the Department of Education, accreditation for MBA programs and business schools, and why accreditation is so important.

This online resource also provides some tips on how to pass the graduate management admission test (GMAT), which a student must often pass to gain admission to an MBA program. The GMAT is run by the Graduate Management Admissions Council (GMAC), which determines the kinds of skills that the GMAT exam must address, the questions to add or remove, and how to implement changes to make the exam better. In April 2018, the GMAC decided to make the GMAT more candidate friendly. Students can check out information about the changes and learn what grades the most exclusive colleges require for entry, among other things.

Those who are interested in learning more about MBA programs on University HQ can visit the University HQ website or contact them on the phone or through email.
