PreciseGryp, a business in Beaverton, OR, has recently launched their tweezers. The company wanted to offer easy, painless and most of all precise tweezing, while at the same time a good looking product. As a result, they finished the tweezers in a sparkly pink. The case is also a matching shade of pink. They are very happy to hear that their customers are not only appreciating the quality of the tweezers, but that they are actually matching the tweezers to their personality. "I love this tweezer," says one happy customer. "It worked good so far and it is well made with good quality stainless steel, I love the color pink with matching pink case that matches my personality. It has a slanted tip that make it a lot easier to use for stray hairs, first aid and a lot more. Very effortless to use not like my old tweezer. This is unique in style and color so all girls would love to have this, It is a great gift also and easy to carry where ever u go. I am very pleased and happy!!!"

Research into color therapy has demonstrated that those who like pink tend to be kind, loving, generous people who are very sensitive to the needs of others. They are also approachable and friendly and find that other people are often drawn to them. Additionally, lovers of pink are very nurturing, not just of themselves and people, but of nature as well.

"Pink is a color that people who want to care for others tend to love," says Dr. Peter Marin, color therapist. "Most people who love this color, be they women or men, tend to be in touch with their feminine side and have a strong maternal instinct."

The research on color therapy is extensive and a lot more is known about the warm, loving nature of people who like pink. Interestingly, it has also been found that they often care about their appearance. This is not out of vanity, but rather because they want to look after themselves as well. The new tweezers enable people to do this.
