Mesa, Arizona - April 30, 2021 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Dry Star Restoration is a company that knows full well that in the aftermath of a fire, property owners have many questions, concerns, and worries as to how they will recover. That's why these reputable emergency fire damage contractors in Tempe wanted to talk more about the recovery process they undertake when someone's property has been impacted by a fire. The company hopes this knowledge will ease the minds of Arizona fire victims by ensuring them that fire damage recovery is not only possible but can achieve some impressive results too.

Richard Appel, the company's owner, noted that quick action is the key to someone being able to recover as much as possible after a fire. That's one of the reasons that Dry Star Restoration makes itself available around the clock to help. Quick action is necessary on a home or business owners' part because the soot and standing water that often accompanies even smaller fires can have a devastating impact on both the structure and contents inside a property. He noted that the quicker they arrive on the scene, the better chance they have of making a big difference with the fire damage restoration services that they can provide. The company owner says that once their crew arrives at a fire-damaged property, they will immediately take steps to make sure the situation is safe and then go about assessing the situation. They will also put their many years of fire damage restoration experience to good use and come up with an impactful restoration plan.

The company says that once the area is safe & secure and a restoration action plan has been decided on, they will next take steps to keep the fire damage problems in the affected area from spreading to other areas of a home or building. Shortly after that, their crews will then take meaningful action that will help preserve fire-damaged areas that were not completely destroyed and salvage the contents in those areas. He says that is followed up by thorough decontamination of the property including the removal of soot in the many areas of a home or business that it often seeps into after a fire. The fire damage process is completed by their talented restoration, reconditioning, and remodeling crews.

Appel also mentioned that they offer many other types of restoration services too. This includes being one of the most sought-after water damage contractors in Phoenix. He added that they also have the necessary experience and specialized equipment to handle mold remediation, asbestos abatement, sewer cleanup, storm repairs, and other general types of cleanup services. They have their remodeling crews too that makes calling them a one-stop solution when it comes to taking care of restoration projects from start to finish.

Those customers that have used Dry Star Restoration's fire damage and other emergency restoration services have been for the most part very impressed with this company's effort. Johnny Peter stated, "I couldn't be happier with my experience with this company. Everything was done perfectly, timely, and efficiently. Robert took care of me throughout the entire process! Highly recommend." Scott Cain proclaimed, "These guys are great! I would highly recommend them to anyone. Their communication and customer support was exceptional, especially considering the chaos that we were dealing with. They have been recognized for their efforts with a BBB best A+ rating and by being named a 2018 Angie's List Super Service Award Winner. Appel stated that they will help their customers with any insurance claims that are related to their needed restoration services and that includes directly billing an insurer for their services.
