The respected Dallas law firm of Mullen & Mullen has just recently posted a new blog article on their website. This article is titled ?How Can You Avoid the Most Dangerous Types of Car Accidents?? and was written by the firm?s managing partner Shane Mullen. It?s all part of this reputable legal practice?s ongoing effort to play an active role in its community.

Mullen stated, ?We like to do things here at our firm that demonstrates that we truly care about our clients and others. A good example of that is the recent blog article that I wrote containing some suggestions on how drivers can better avoid the three deadliest types of car accidents. If we can save even one life, the time that my colleagues and I spend writing our informational blog articles will have been well worth it.?

In the firm?s newly posted article, it started by saying that even though a person cannot control what happens when diving, they can learn steps that minimize risk while doing it. The first type of dangerous accident that was mentioned is pileups. These are especially common when wet and slippery road conditions occur because cars then require significantly increased stopping time. Mullen?s advice to avoid pileups is to stay off of highways when poor road conditions occur and also to reduce speed and increase following distance. The Mullen & Mullen Law Firm article also discussed Head-On Collisions. The managing partner suggested in the article that if someone sees a vehicle coming towards them in their lane, they should get on the breaks lightly, smoothly steer towards the shoulder, and blow the horn and flash the car lights in an attempt to get the oncoming driver?s attention. He wrote that even going in a ditch is better than being involved in a head-on collision. The article wrapped up by talking about steps someone can take to avoid having a potentially deadly rollover incident. This includes maintaining a safe following distance, not operating a vehicle under the influence of drugs or alcohol, watching out for debris in the roadway, and avoiding distracted driving situations.

Attorney Mullen went on to say that his firm can provide excellent legal help for those in the Dallas area that had the misfortune of being injured in an auto accident through no fault of their own. Litigating vehicle accident-related and other personal injury claims is something that this firm has been successfully doing since its inception in 1982. They have established a track record of favorably resolving such cases as those involving workplace accidents, slip & fall events, dog bites, wrongful death, and just about any other type of personal injury there is. He stated that the lead attorneys on their staff put to full use the auto accident-related and other personal injury litigation experience the firm has gained during their nearly 40 years in practice. It was also pointed out that when someone retains their car accident-related or other personal injury legal services, they are getting a highly motivated legal team on their side that gets nothing unless they resolve a case in a client?s favor.

Those that have used the legal services that Mullen & Mullen Law Firm has to offer review them very favorably. Caleb Tate stated, ?Shane Mullen is a very down-to-earth guy. He's extremely personable. He'll give you the truth not watered down. He'll fight to get you what you deserve! I would suggest him as a personal injury attorney to anyone I know. Mullen & Mullen has my trust 100%. This is the second case they've worked for me and I wouldn't have it any other way.? This review was taken from this firm?s Google Business Listing where they have a very respectable 4.8 out of a possible 5-star rating.
