

Tri State Exteriors Announces Its New Metal Roof Spring Special

May 10, 2021

Fort Wayne, Indiana - May 10, 2021 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Tri-State Exteriors: Fort Wayne Roofing Company has just announced that they will be running a new metal roof spring special. This limited-time $2500 offer consists of both new metal roof installations and whole metal roof replacements. The company also stated that its new metal roof deal will even include a lifetime transferable warranty. It's a great way for homeowners in Fort Wayne, Indiana to not only save some money but also to get the many benefits that come with having a metal roof on top of their house.

The company owner, Jacob Ferry, says, "Many homeowners are excited about our spring special. This special is intended to help provide relief to those who want a new metal roof but may need some extra savings to be able to comfortably afford it. Metal roofs are becoming extremely popular because they can easily last 40 to 50 years with minimal maintenance. This means it can be the last roof many homeowners will ever need. We hope as many people as possible in Fort Wayne take advantage of this limited-time offer before it expires."

Ferry went on to talk about how spring weather often brings powerful hailstorms and thunderstorms. Having a new roof installed before an old, worn-down roof starts leaking can save a homeowner thousands of dollars on interior work and structural repairs. He says that this gets even better if that new roof is a metal roof because of all of the advantages that these types of roofs offer. It was already mentioned that they are one of the most durable roof covering materials that are available. The neatly seamed way they are placed down and the different colors the panels are available in also make them a very decorative roofing option. According to the company owner, homeowners that choose the raised seam version of their metal roof panels will also get a nearly leak-proof roofing option. That's because these panels are seamed together above the normal water runoff channel. So even if the seams on them come apart at some point in time, there is still not a big possibility of water getting to the roof sheathing below them. He added that metal roofing panels do not weigh as much as an asphalt shingle roof which helps keep roof weight down during heavy snowfalls and they require very little upkeep during their lifetime. Ferry went on to say that once the old roof covering and insulating underlayment comes off, they will do a thorough inspection of the entire roof structure and alert the homeowner to any concerns this brings up. They will also replace the insulating underlayment as part of the metal roof installation process. He added that they only use quality metal roofing panels and their metal roof installation crews are led by experienced crew chiefs that are some of the best at what they do. Those that have had a new metal roof installed by this company rave about the results. Thomas McClenaghan wrote, "We bit the bullet and had our roof replaced in September by Tri-State Exteriors as we decided to go with a new metal roof for our home. I am extremely pleased with the quality of the workmanship and the overall performance of the Tri-State Exteriors roofing team. They truly work as a team! Even many of my neighbors have commented how great my new roof looks (and I have referred their information to many). A special 'thank you' to Doug for keeping us informed throughout the entire metal roof replacement process. Anytime a change was happening, we were the first to know. Tri-State cleaned up around my property more than satisfactorily too. I'd go as far to call this the best roofing company in Fort Wayne."
